World War Weapons, 300 Planes Go to Allies

Obsolete Munitions Released; Officials May Free 1,000 'Surplus' Aircraft

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Large quantities of rifles, machine guns and cannon were on their way from American Army arsenals to the embattled Allied armies last night as the Administration yielded to Anglo-French pleas for immediate aid.

Stocks of World War weapons, declared surplus by the Army high command, are already moving into warehouses of the United States Steel Corporation for reshipment to France, it was learned. The steel company, it was said, is buying the arms from the War Department and reselling to the Allies.

Army and Navy warplanes, perhaps 300 at once, will be turned over to aircraft manufacturers for resale to the Allies. Later, it was authoritatively reported, nearly 1,000 craft will be declared "surplus" and "turned in" to manufacturers in exchange for newer models and will be resold abroad.

Aid "Very Substantial"

There was no official word as to the quantity of Army and Navy armament to be made available to the Allies through private companies, but one highly-placed quarter said the aid thus furnished them would be "very substantial."

Negotiations are still under way, it was said, so definite statements as to amount of arms involved cannot be made. Present plans, however, call for turning over to U. S. Steel, 800,000 Lee-Enfield rifles, nearly 1,000 75-millimeter guns of British and French makes, some Lewis machine guns and large quantities of ammunition.

Meanwhile, efforts to speed the industrial production of new Army and Navy equipment went forward. Developments were:

Assistant Secretary of War Johnson announced that one of the Army's new pursuit planes would be flown to the Ford plant in Michigan Monday with an Air Corps technical expert aboard to explain its features to Ford engineers. This action, it was said,

Bees on the Flag! 'Sho' Means War'

She wasn't alone long. Hundreds of followers made themselves at home in an American flag flying at the gates of the United States Treasury.

An aged darkie passing by shook his head and said, "When bees swarm on the flag it sho' means war."

Then came Traffic Policemen P. G. Mangum and W. E. Propa. Mangum climbed a stepladder and gingerly lifted the bee-laden flag from its socket.

The situation was not in hand until Paul Duvall, of 310 Peyton street, Alexandria, drove up in his taxicab.

"I know about bees," he said, dipping one hand into the swarm and bringing out the queen. "I'm taking them home. These babies are worth $10."

And gently placing the queen in the pasteboard box, and all her followers about her, Duvall carried his newest hive to his cab.

Subcommittee In House Votes Defense Taxes

Income Levy Rises To Bring in Billion; Action Unanimous

Increased corporate and personal income taxes, which will boost the yield of the new national defense revenue bill to more than a billion dollars, were tentatively approved by a unanimous House Ways and Means subcommittee yesterday.

The proposals, which will be passed upon by the full committee today, involve raising corporation income tax rates by 1 per cent, and increasing all personal income taxes by lowering exemptions from $2,500 to $2,000 for married persons and from $1,000 to $800 for single individuals, as well as lifting surtax rates in the brackets from $6,000 to $100,000.

These increases are in addition to the heightened excise taxes on a long list of commodities and a 10 per cent supertax on all income levies—which have already been approved by the full committee.

Adds 2,000,000 to Rolls

Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the Ways and Means subcommittee, estimated that over 2,000,000 new taxpayers would be brought onto the rolls, making a total of approximately 6,000,000.

While the increased surtax rates begin only at the $5,000 level, Cooper pointed out, the new bill has the effect of raising taxes for everybody with an income of $2,000 or more (if married) and $800 up (if single). By lowering the exemptions, the Government obtains increased reve-

The plane arrived later at Bucharest.

Italy Calls All Ships Into Port

Marshal De Bono Gets Command Of an Army as War Crisis Nears Head

By the Associated Press

Rome, June 7.—Italy made the world aware tonight that her hour of decision is near by holding her ships at a world standstill and by putting her armies to the ready.

Italians heard without surprise the widespread reports abroad that the scheduled sailings of all Italian merchant ships had been canceled and that those in foreign waters had been ordered to take cover in neutral harbors.

While there was no official confirmation here of these reports, a reliable source said the great Italian liner Rex would not sail June 12, although the line still accepted reservations.

Other departures likewise were reported secretly called off.

Armament was speeded. The Italian air force was granted $380,000,000 for its expanded program in the next three years. The navy got $80,000,000 for armament aboard and ashore.

De Bono Heads Army

A 74-year-old veteran of many a tough colonial campaign, Marshal Emilio De Bono, was put in command of Italy's southern armies—the forces which would be expected to do much of the fighting upon Italy's entrance into the war.

Military experts believed that Marshal De Bono's new command included the troops of Libya—from which some Fascists have openly predicted a campaign against Egypt in an effort to capture the Suez Canal, as essential to the maintenance of the British lifeline.

The announcement of the marshal's elevation spoke of a "group." There has been but one army in southern Italy and two in Libya. Thus, it was said, the three might be formed into a single force.

Among the day's significant developments was the fact that foreign circles were told that diplomatic relations between Italy and Russia—who has understandings with Germany—were being improved.

Italian Ambassador Augusto Rosso is expected to return to Moscow, which he left several months ago after Josef Stalin recalled the new Soviet Ambassador Nicolai Gorelchin from Rome because of hostile demonstrations over the Russian invasion of Finland. Gorelchin's return to Rome shortly was predicted.

All branches of the Fascist Party stood in readiness to hear Mussolini's long expected trumpet call.

33 Ships in Americas

Copyright by New York Times

New York, June 7.—The far-reaching network of the Italian merchant marine ordered withdrawn from all seas today, found 33 vessels with an aggregate of nearly 200,000 gross tons either in American and South American ports, or near enough to reach the safety of neutral harbors if Italy enters the war suddenly.

Five ships were tied up in New York and longshore workers were laid off during the day with the holds half loaded.

House Votes, 2 to 1, for New Labor Board

Wagner Act Revision Passed; Senate Likely To Pigeonhole Bills

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

By a ratio of exactly two to one, the House yesterday voted to abolish the National Labor Relations Board and create a new one and to accept the drastic Smith amendments to the Wagner act as approved by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor.

Bringing to a climax the long fight over changing the Nation's basic law, the House rapidly and with a minimum of friction passed the Smith bill by a vote of 258 to 129. The legislation now goes to the Senate, where it is generally expected to die in committee.

The Smith measure, sponsored by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, was adopted exactly as recommended by the majority of his special committee investigating the Labor Board, except for the four modifications proposed this week by Green and one other change to prevent aliens representing employes in collective bargaining negotiations. The antialien amendment, offered by Representative Allen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, would strike at Harry Bridges, C. I. O. maritime labor leader on the West Coast.

D. C. Youth Leaps Off S. S. Potomac; Search Fails

A youth identified by a girl companion as Robert Grey, 21, of 1190 Morse street northeast, leaped from the Steamer Potomac last night just above Alexandria, Va., during an argument with a special policeman.

Harbor police said they were told the young man, a sheet metal worker, was clinging to a guard rail from overside when a special policeman attempted to persuade him to climb back on deck. They said he threatened to jump unless left alone and carried out his threat when the policeman persisted.

Passengers reported they saw him swimming toward the Maryland shore. The Potomac stopped and lowered a boat which searched for Grey under searchlights about 45 minutes.

D.C. Committee Votes to Bar Alien Dentists

They and Podiatrists Would Be Unable To Obtain Licenses

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Prohibitions against the licensing of dentists or podiatrists who are not citizens of the United States or have not declared their intention of becoming so are carried in bills regulating both professions as approved yesterday by the Senate District Committee.

The citizenship requirement is similar to a provision in the District supply bill for 1941, but is without precedent in the regulation of professions in Washington.

The dentistry bill, which was sponsored by the District Dental Society, was said to have been modeled after the New York regulatory law in this respect. The measure has passed the House.

The ban on aliens will not apply, however, to dentists or podiatrists who hold licenses. Upon recommendation of Senator Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, the Senate committee relaxed the requirement in the House bill to permit persons who have declared their intention of becoming citizens to apply for licenses. The licensee must obtain citizenship papers within six years, however, or lose the license.

The District Committee, trying to clear its calendar for adjournment, voted to report favorably 15 bills, most of which have passed the

Amateur Portable Radio Stations Virtually Outlawed

Amateur radio broadcasting in the United States once again was restricted yesterday by a Federal Communications Commission order virtually outlawing amateur portable stations.

Early this week the FCC banned amateur radio communication with foreign countries.

Yesterday's order prohibiting the operation of portable stations exempted only those using short-range frequencies. Such stations, it was explained, do not carry farther than the line of sight.

The commission declined to elaborate on its formal order, but an official said there had been reports that portable stations, which are difficult to locate, had been used for sending messages to foreign countries and to ships at sea.

Ireland Hints At Conscription

Weygand's Trap Broken, Berlin Says

Maginot Line Has Been Weakened, Army Says, Sees Italy Set to Act

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 7.—Germans at home were kept on a lean diet of war news tonight from the battle line.

The high command, claiming only "progress on schedule," acknowledged it was meeting "stiff resistance" from heavier arms than had been expected.

Cheered by army statements that "Weygand's surprise," France's resilient defense of depth, had been "broken on a front 62 miles wide," the populace waited at radios for bulletins that might tell the speed of the march toward Paris.

Paris, "A Matter of Days"

Accustomed to graphic, detailed communiques during the sweep across the Low Countries, Germans had to content themselves with a few terse announcements which made no claims of towns taken.

But from the press and other informed sources the word spread that:

France has greatly weakened her vaunted Maginot Line to bolster the Somme-Aisne front.

Germany's oil reserve, increased from a six-month supply at the outbreak of war to enough to last eight months, is only now being touched.

Italy's plunge into war hinges on destruction of French air force, then distraction of Poilus by a siege of Paris so France would not have strength to spare for a counter-blow at Italian overseas possessions.

Meanwhile confidence grew that the conquest of Paris is but a matter of days.

Nazi newspapers stressed that France now fights alone—with the German punch toward Le Havre intended to separate finally the French and British fighting forces.

Then would come what the press has termed "settlement with England."

Boast of Reserves

One newspaper said "France fights without the possibility of strategic tactical utilization of the Maginot Line. Weygand has thrown all available troops and materials into the Somme-Aisne defenses to oppose the German attack as long as possible."

It added:

"His preparations on these historic rivers can hardly hold off the Germans with countless new divisions after the Germans already have broken through the line on a front 100 kilometers (62 miles) wide."

High army sources disclosed, however, that France's swiftly devised defense system made the going hard and gave the Reich's blitzkrieg machine a "real problem."

Heavy artillery fire and an ingenious use of natural obstacles to make every gulley a trench, every clump of trees a fort, were combined in France's stubborn defense of every inch of the homeland soil.

The War Today . . .

GERMAN TANKS drove at the left, right and center of the Weygand first line on the Aisne-Somme front yesterday. The French claimed to have annihilated every German unit that crossed the Aisne east of Soissons.

BERLIN ISSUED only a terse, indefinite communique, unlike the detailed claims made in previous days of the great "Battle of France." The communique admitted the Nazis were meeting stiffer resistance than anticipated.

GREAT BRITAIN continued to harass the German rear and northwest Germany industrial regions with air attacks. At the same time, the English south and west coasts were raided.

ITALY CALLED her ships home from the seas or ordered them to be ready to flee to neutral harbors if Mussolini joins the war.

PARIS PREPARED for invasion from the air by blocking possible landing fields with barricades.

Germans Raid Eight Counties In England

Bomber Crashes In Suffolk; R. A. F. Fires Oil in Hamburg

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday) June 8.—German air raiders, in the third successive night of attacks on England, roared over eight counties late last night, one circling low to machine-gun the houses of a southeast port town while another crashed and burned in east Suffolk.

One German airman was reported killed, another injured, and one captured in the unexplained midnight crash.

The machine-gunning plane which struck at the unidentified coast town dropped no bombs, but circled repeatedly close to earth. Residents escaped injury by huddling for 45 minutes in shelters.

Alarm Lasts an Hour

The alarms were in Cambridge, Norfolk, Essex, Suffolk, Kent, Northumberland, Durham and Yorkshire.

In one southeast coast county, the roar of planes was heard directly overhead, punctuated by bursts of gunfire.

The planes first flew to the south, then returned, heading inward toward the west. Then they wheeled back again, pursued by the continual clatter of machine-gun fire.

In Norfolk, where the alarm lasted about an hour, compared with five minutes in Durham, deep-throated explosions were heard in the distance.

Allied Left Slowly Falls Back, Taking Heavy Toll

Tanks That Crossed Aisne Wiped Out, Infantry Stopped, Paris Reports

By the Associated Press

Paris, June 7.—The long Allied front lines, selling every foot of scarred French ground at a fearful price in death for the invaders, backed away from furious German attacks all along the Somme front tonight at the order of Gen. Maxime Weygand.

The generalissimo, in a communique written in his own hand, made plain that the withdrawal of advance units was to meet the double flanking movement characteristic of the German offensive. The main, deep defensive system was still holding.

Only to that extent did he release his men from his order of the first day of battle:

"Hold tight to the soil of France!"

Aisne Attackers Wiped Out

Even as they fell back, Weygand reported they had "wiped out" every German who crossed the Aisne River on the French east flank in an advance east of Soissons.

The Germans, he said, were not "counting their losses."

The New York Times correspondent reported that, although the Germans in an all-day battle hurled masses of infantry behind the doomed tank units that crossed the Aisne, at no point were the foot-soldiers able to get to the southern bank of the river.]

At the same time, Nazi tanks broke through in the far west of the front in the region of the upper Bresle River. But the French "support positions"—networks of guns which the general had designed to cut them down with crossfire—were holding firm.

The day's action along the 125-mile front of the Somme and Aisne thus saw heavy action at both ends, and also at Weygand's strongly defended center.

The effort to cross the Aisne—in an area about 60 miles from Paris—was choked off in one of the day's most violent battles.

An artillery bombardment ushered it in, but those who bridged the river did so only to die on the left bank.

The center of the front was no less ablaze. There, the war ministry spokesman announced, the Germans were attacking heavily tonight, with tanks and waves of infantry.

The center blow was sprung from the Oise Valley, north of Soissons, an old battleground.

Planes' Guns Smash Tanks

In the whole battle area, where half a million Nazis were on the charge, the French reported cutting down many more German tanks than the 400 already declared to have been smashed in traps. The dive bombers, so active in the German successes in the north, were fewer, too, today.

The French used cannon-carrying airplanes to pound the tanks from above.

In this third day of the "Battle of France," as Weygand has chosen to call it, the Reichswehr used 40 divisions of infantry (approximately 500,000 men) to fold back the flanks of the French and try to take the Weygand Line from the rear.

Tonight Weygand's center remained intact.

The Germans used two Panzer divisions, or 1,000 tanks, in the Peronne sector alone yesterday in try-

Aftermath of Tragedy

Drowning Spurs Campaign To Remove Ponds in District

A campaign to rid Washington of its swamp pools was promised last night by Commissioner David McCoach, jr., who gave orders to begin work today to drain the pool in the 5900 block of New Hampshire avenue northwest, where a 9-year-old boy was drowned Thursday.

The Engineer Commissioner said he would order every policeman to report pools and would follow up such information by inspections.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, met with Col. McCoach to map plans for the campaign. Capt. Whitehurst said he would take charge of inspecting "every single one" of the pools reported.

All District departments, no matter how remotely connected with the abatement of these nuisances, will be coordinated by the Commissioner. In some cases, stagnant water is permitted to accumulate on private property. In these cases, the Health Department will serve notices on the owners to eliminate the condition.

Thursday's tragedy which resulted in Billy Benton, of 5603 North Capitol street, losing his life, came after the Highway Department had completed plans for draining the pool.

Capt. Whitehurst said yesterday he would order the removal of a dirt slide clogging the end of a 42-inch pipe which normally drains the pond.

The Health Department has on hand reports of six ponds. There are many more in the city, Capt. Whitehurst said.

Rich Reward for Services

Industrialist's 'Man Friday' Wins $1,033,328 Verdict

By the Associated Press

Providence, R. I., June 7.—Hushed gasps of amazement arose in a sparsely filled courtroom late today as a Superior Court jury returned a verdict of $1,000,000 and $33,338.21 interest for Dutee W. Flint in his promissory note suit against the estate of Samuel M. Nicholson, wealthy industrialist.

Flint, whose suit for $1,000,000 has been heard for the past several weeks, claimed the late Colonel Nicholson had given him a promissory note for that amount, "payable after death," in return for "invaluable services."

William H. Edwards, member of counsel for the Nicholson estate, immediately announced that the defense would file a motion for a new trial.

Trial of the million-dollar suit started last April 23 with Flint testifying he had lost a $10,000,000 motor car business in the 1929 crash and that Col. Nicholson had promised to "make him a millionaire again" in return for his "virtual enslavement" to the head of the Nicholson File Co.

He described his activities as valet and butler, "Man Friday" and travel agent, backgammon opponent and business mentor to the aged man, in return for which Col. Nicholson handed him the million-dollar note, payable after death.

Defense counsel introduced witnesses who testified the colonel was of unsound mind at the time the note was signed in October, 1937, and, in the closing argument, contended it had been obtained by fraud.

WORKS projects of various kinds have been among the most roundly criticized and most warmly defended of all New Deal ventures. You may not laugh so hard at these "shovel leaner" jokes after you've gone through "Our Town in Pictures" this Sunday—the eight-page picture story of FWA, which includes WPA, PWA, USHA and the Bureaus of Public Buildings and Public Roads. Read this Sunday Post article and become an expert on hemisphere defense. There's a full page map to help you, too.

But whether defense will be easy or no, millions of men are expected to spring to arms over night in case America is attacked. Would they? See Sunday's Gallup Poll for the answers (from men under 45) to "Would you personally volunteer if the United States were attacked?" "Would you, if Canada were attacked and United States troops were sent to her aid?"

And we can learn some lessons in defense from Canada, once so-o-o complacent, now so grim. Particularly so in the matter of how long it takes to prepare a real air force. Inez Robb, of the INS (one of The Post's five wire services—adv.) went to Canada, found out all about it and reports it for you tomorrow.

But whether American defenses are, or can be made, adequate may depend less on what happens on this side of the Atlantic than on the other. Eddie Folliard's war review faithfully brings you a rounded picture of what's what in the war this week.

G. O. P. Sees 3d Term Move In Early Adjournment Plans

Republicans Fear To Leave Roosevelt At Publicity's Fount

By Robert C. Albright

House and Senate Democratic leaders strove against odds yesterday to meet White House wishes for adjournment of Congress by June 22 as Republicans charged the move is "part of the third term plan."

Minority spokesmen, who would be robbed of a Capitol sounding board for the duration of the campaign, termed the attempt to adjourn in two weeks "political" and an effort to leave Mr. Roosevelt unopposed and alone in the Washington picture.

First pre-campaign partisanship in an unusually non-partisan session appeared likely to blaze on the adjournment issue as party lines clove sharply on a June 22 getaway.

A lengthy program meanwhile was clipped short by Democratic leaders, who prepared to ditch the Walter-Logan bill, the House-passed Smith labor bill and the no less controversial antilynching measure.

Calendar Mainly Defense

Save for minor bills on the calendar, the important measures definitely slated for passage were the pending May-Sheppard bill for strengthening the national defense, legislation for fingerprinting and registration of aliens, the $1,073,584,916 relief bill and the billion-dollar defense tax bill.

Democratic leaders conceded this is a large order for two weeks but drove for action. Republican leaders eyed the program skeptically. Commented Senate Minority Leader McNary: "If Congress is concerned with adequate legislation, it is not possible to adjourn by June 22." But McNary said Democrats have the controlling votes "and might do it by day and night sessions."

Republicans of both Houses who resolved in separate conferences to fight to hold Congress in session for the duration of the international emergency received encouragement yesterday from the railroad brotherhoods. Their official publication, Labor, demanded Congress remain in session "in this crisis."

Chief legislative barrier to adjournment in a fortnight appeared the emergency defense tax bill to be called up in the House on Tuesday and which Senate Finance Chairman Harrison hopes to rush to the Senate floor.

War Profits Debate Impends

Senate leaders have persuaded Senator Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, to withhold his "draft capital" amendment, but it was learned last night that Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, will offer the old war profits amendment, which may bring long and controversial Senate debate.

Adjournment by June 22 would close the Capitol two days in advance of the June 24 Republican convention. If the move fails, Congress is expected to recess for the G. O. P. meeting.

The President, meanwhile, was represented in one quarter as favoring in addition to a June 22 adjournment an even later date than July 15 for the Democratic convention. But the time having been set by the Democratic National Committee, the arrangements committee to be designated tomorrow by Postmaster General Farley was expected to proceed with the program as scheduled.

Van Nuys Adamant

A pause came yesterday in the series of Democratic third-term pronouncements, with two other developments less favorable.

Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, who at the President's request had agreed to forego a court of claims judgeship to run again for Congress, reconsidered his action.

Jones said yesterday he would "not be a candidate for reelection to Congress." Friends added that Jones considered it unfair to those who have filed for his seat to reenter the race. Jones has been considered a House pillar of the President's farm program, and Mr. Roosevelt's action in asking him to stay had been interpreted by some as concrete evidence that the President plans another term. Jones' Court of Claims appointment has been confirmed by the Senate and he has only to take the oath. He may remain at his House post until January.

Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, served notice that he would turn down an invitation to be one of the Indiana delegates to the Democratic convention if the delegation is instructed for renomination of the President. Federal Security Administrator McNutt, Indiana's "favorite son," has declared for a third term.

Van Nuys said he is not opposed personally to President Roosevelt, "but I am unalterably opposed to a third term for any man." He said reelection of the President "would break down one of the last traditional strongholds of our form of government."

U. S. Appeals Court Agrees to Review 6-Hour Writ Test

Granting of a writ of error by the United States Court of Appeals yesterday in a test suit tried last February in Municipal Court cleared the way for examination of the legality of the six-hour writ.

Under the District code a police official who does not release a prisoner or issue a warrant against him within six hours after the writ is served must forfeit $500.

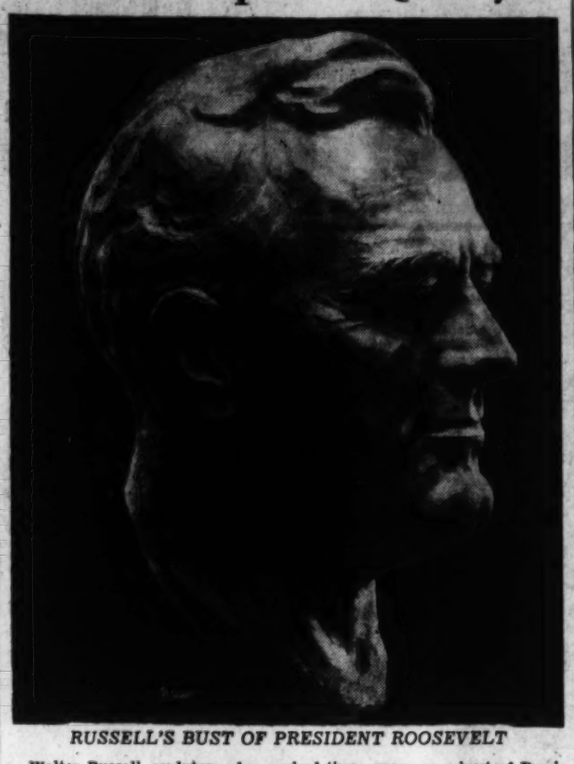
Principal in the test case is James F. Donovan, sentenced last month in United States District Court to serve three to six years in a liquor store holdup. Donovan had filed a $500 suit in Municipal Court against Superintendent of Police Maj. Ernest W. Brown because he was held 45 hours for "investigation."

A Municipal Court jury returned a verdict in Maj. Brown's favor. When Judge Nathan Cayton refused a new trial, Attorney James J. Laughlin applied for a writ of error.

Yacht Bill Signed

The Navy Department received authority in a bill signed yesterday by President Roosevelt to accept as a gift from Sterling Morton, of Chicago, the 90-foot yacht Freedom for use as a training vessel at the Naval Academy.

Sculptor Russell Captures Roosevelt's Spiritual Quality



RUSSELL'S BUST OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Walter Russell, sculptor, who worked three years on a bust of President Roosevelt, striving to capture the spiritual quality and finally succeeding, said here yesterday that the task was the hardest of his career.

"He is the hardest man I ever tried to interpret." Russell, pleasant-eyed and goateed, gestured with his hands in explaining it. He has a great admiration for the President and worked with him formally and informally in 40 intervals, sometimes when the President didn't know he was around. It was hard, however, to explain.

"He presents the human side of himself to humans and tries to sensitize himself to them. That is his negative expression. The positive side is inscrutable and he hid it from me a plenty. But he is a wonderful listener. When he was listening I got a lot."

The President is said to be very pleased with Russell's work.

He saw in the President a mind full of large concepts, and a mind that thinks in wholes of ideas, not of part ideas. He saw no change in the President's facial lines because of the strain from the war. "I only noticed the light that came from his eyes by way of change," he observed.

Russell is stopping here at the Mayflower Hotel during a visit in connection with the projected John Philip Sousa Memorial. He is the Memorial sculptor.

House or are on the House calendar for consideration Monday. Chairman King announced, however, that another meeting will be necessary to act upon several measures referred to subcommittees.

President Signs Three D. C. Bills

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt signed three District bills, the most important of which amends the indeterminate sentence and parole act. The two other bills permit the Commissioners to lease parking space in the Municipal Center and tacks an administrative amendment on the adoption law.

Among the House bills approved by the Senate District Committee were the amendments to the unemployment compensation act, which lower the payroll tax and raise the benefits.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, tacked on an amendment, however, which relates to the District income tax law. It was designed to exempt farm cooperatives from the levy. He explained he was willing to attach it to any revenue bill but that the unemployment compensation measure was the nearest thing to a tax bill he could find.

Disagree on Cost to District

The committee and District officials became embroiled in a row over whether the city should repay erroneously collected special assessments as far back as 1874 after Tydings insisted that Gerald M. Johnson, an attorney representing the majority of the claimants, be heard.

Auditor Danel J. Donovan said the legislation would cost the District $2,000,000 and Johnson argued that it would not exceed $500,000. The claims grew out of the invalidated Borland law principally. Johnson admitted that the claims of his own clients amount to about $400,000.

After Senator King had backed up the Commissioners in their objections to the bill, Senator Tydings suggested that Johnson confer with Maj. Donovan and Corporation Counsel Seal during the Congressional recess and report to the committee next January.

The committee approved the compromise bill providing for the recording of motor vehicle liens at the Department of Vehicles and Traffic under direction of the Recorder of Deeds. A similar measure is on the House calendar. The Senate for two years has refused to pass a bill which took the function away from the Recorder of Deeds' control.

Authority for the Secretary of the Treasury to fix an interest rate on the District PWA loan as low as private loans would be obtainable was voted by the committee. The bill, which is on the House calendar, is expected to save the city between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 and to reduce the amortization period from 25 to 15 years.

Retirement Bill Referred

Bills allowing police and firemen voluntary retirement at half pay after 25 years, defining the District-Virginia boundary, and providing for appeals from ABC Board denials of licenses and under-30-day suspensions were referred to subcommittees for consideration.

The Commissioners objected to the retirement bill, and Auditor Donovan estimated it would cost $330,000 a year. A spokesman for the firemen insisted that the cost would be only $25,000 a year. Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, will hold hearings.

The committee approved a bill to set up a board for the regulation of funeral establishments in Washington, although no action has been taken on a similar measure in the House.

Minor measures approved were: Authority for the Commissioners to borrow $450,000 from the Federal Works Agency for the erection of a Recorder of Deeds Building; direction for the District to give water free to the Jewish Community Center and the Boys Club; permission for Mrs. Elizabeth E. Peeples, school principal, to purchase retirement credits for $3,200; authority for District employes to testify in court without loss of annual leave; a minor amendment to the life insurance act; the placing of junior colleges under the Board of Education; restoration of authority for the juvenile court to have concurrent jurisdiction with District court in non-support cases, and increase of $150 a year in the pay of members of the board of licensure for engineres.

Wallace Asks FCA to Share With Farmers

Urges Incentive For Growers to Pay Their Loans Promptly

By the Associated Press

Secretary Wallace, reiterating his belief that agriculture needs permanent relief from "excessive" farm mortgage debts, proposed yesterday that the multibillion-dollar Farm Credit Administration share its profits and losses with farmer borrowers.

The proposal was advanced before the Senate Banking Committee at a hearing on legislation designed to reduce interest rates on Government loans and to authorize the credit agency to scale down "excessive" debts.

Critics of the legislation have asserted it would eliminate cooperative features of the present system. The measure would do away with a requirement that farmer-borrowers buy stock in a local credit association equal to 5 per cent of his loan.

Asserting that this requirement had defeated the cooperative principle, Wallace said Congress should provide definite incentives for farmers to pay promptly and for local credit associations to make sound loans.

"I propose that provision be made in the bill for the banks to share profits and losses with their borrowers by paying patronage dividends proportionate to the size of the borrowers' loans, and that, in addition, premium payments, based on the effectiveness with which an association has done its job, be made to local associations which earn such payments, to be distributed by them in turn to their members as an additional reduction in the cost of their loans."

Wallace declared this plan would "assure the continuation of legitimate competition "in the long-term farm credit field "on a basis of fair costs and services to farmers." He added that "Government agencies should have no monopoly."

Carl B. Robbins, president of the Commodity Credit Corporation, estimated yesterday that by July 31, 1941, the corporation will own outright or hold under loan between 10,500,000 and 12,500,000 bales of cotton.

Robbins testified before the House Banking Committee in support of the bill of Chairman Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, which would increase from $900,000,000 to $1,400,000,000 the credit resources of the corporation.

Supporters of the measure said the additional $500,000,000 would be needed to meet credit requirements for the next crop year. Without the increase, it was contended, the domestic markets would be glutted because of the loss of some foreign markets as a result of the European war.

U. S. to Curb Sale of Securities Seized in German Invasions

British 'Free' Pound Ban Makes Dollar World's Money King

Ukase Requiring Trading Only on Basis Of Official Exchange Seen as Boon To U. S. Business; No Price Rise Expected

Great Britain has crowned the American dollar king of the world's few remaining "free" currencies, Government officials said yesterday in the wake of a London announcement that the British government has virtually abolished trading in the unofficial, or cheaper edition of the pound stirling.

The verdict of experts at the Treasury and Federal Reserve Board was that American business need expect no severe hardships from the British ruling that all foreign business hereafter be conducted at the official rates for the pound, $4.02½-$4.03½, instead of the "free" rate, recently 80 cents cheaper, that had prevailed for many payments before.

In fact, it was even predicted that there would be definite benefits for producers of some American commodities, notably cotton, hides, wool, lard and cottonseed.

See Definite Benefits

The British move, requiring that those doing business with Britain pay for the pound what the British government thinks it is worth rather than what the free market thinks it is worth, was officially interpreted as a British move to accumulate badly needed supplies of foreign exchange to pay for war necessities.

The new tightening of British currency control means for Americans that everything they buy in countries linked to the pound sterling must be paid for in the more expensive currency. Previously this more expensive currency payment had been required only for a designated list of the British Empire's "key" exports—rubber, tin, jute, whisky, furs and diamonds.

Thus, officials said, there might be a tendency for prices of British-produced tea, spices, gums, Indian and Egyptian cotton, cotton goods and textiles to rise. These items could formerly be paid for at the "free" rate.

No Undue Price Rise

An undue rise in prices of these commodities will be checked, however, by the fact that competing goods are easily obtainable outside the pound sterling area, officials believed.

One benefit to the United States seen by Government experts in the British action is that a more expensive pound makes it more difficult for low-cost British goods to flood into the United States over tariff barriers. Previously the Treasury had been under pressure from some American manufacturers to take steps to keep cheap-currency British goods from jumping the tariff wall.

The Treasury acted several weeks ago to limit the benefits of British exporters from the low "free market rate by ordering that all customs duties on imports from Britain should be figured at the "official" rate.

Orders All Imported Issues Be Inspected, Ownership Proved

To prevent Germany from profiting by wealth seized in invaded countries, the Treasury yesterday ruled that imported securities must pass through the hands of postal, customs and Federal Reserve Bank officials.

The quarantine order, signed by Secretary of the Treasury Morganthau and President Roosevelt, said that imported securities must be accompanied by proof that they do not come from owners in Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Norway or Denmark.

Though Germany was not named in the order, Treasury officials explained that its purpose was to keep Germany from sending seized securities into the United States by mail for sale here and thus accumulating foreign exchange reserves.

The Treasury action would affect stocks and bonds totaling $754,000,000 held in the invaded countries named in President Roosevelt's "freeze" order, officials said. The Netherlands, with $585,000,000 in American stocks and bonds, holds the greatest share.

Only securities imports exempt from the inspection order were those from Great Britain, France, Canada, Newfoundland and Bermuda. A special order carrying these exemptions followed the original quarantine order by a few hours yesterday.

Imports of securities from all other countries, the Treasury ruling meant, will have to be submitted to a Federal Reserve Bank for proof of ownership. Customs and postal officials were authorized to inspect packages and mail containing such securities and to turn their findings over to Federal Reserve banks.

Treasury officials explained that they had no knowledge yet of German attempts to ship such securities here, but that yesterday's action was designed to forestall any such attempts.

New York brokerage circles believed the order was an attempt to deal with the problem of establishing ownership of stocks and bonds made out merely to "bearer" rather than registered in the name of individual investors, the Associated Press reported.

Foreigners dealing in American securities often made them out to "bearer," thus making it easy to ship them here through neutral countries, brokers said.

House Approves Revising of NLRB

which bogged down in the House when they became overloaded, friends of the Smith bill yesterday carefully limited the alterations made from the floor. Aside from the Green and Allen amendments, only a handful of changes were proposed and these were all easily beaten.

Although the National Labor Relations Board and the Wagner Act which set it up have formed one of the most bitterly disputed domestic issues in recent years, hardly a quarter of the House membership was on the floor during much of the debate yesterday afternoon.

Just before finally approving the Smith bill, the House voted, 246 to 137, to throw out a much more moderate measure, presented by Chairman Norton of the House Labor Committee, which would have enlarged the present board by two new members.

"It's your funeral, not mine," commented Mrs. Norton as she observed that the Labor Committee "has had no assistance whatever from the leadership of the House" in its attempt to forestall the Smith amendments with its own less drastic bill.

As it now stands, the Smith bill would replace the existing Labor Board with a new three-man body to be appointed by the President with Senate approval. The present members could be reappointed.

A new office of administrator is set up under the bill, in order sharply to separate the quasi-judicial functions of the board from its prosecuting functions. Appointed by the President with Senate consent, the administrator would have charge of investigations and prosecutions and the board itself would act only in a judicial capacity.

In a section entirely rewritten on suggestion of A. F. L. President Green and sponsored before the House by Representative Routzohn (Republican), of Ohio, a member of the Smith committee, the right of employes to choose their own representatives for collective bargaining is carefully protected. This amendment would have the effect of saving small craft unions from submersion in larger units. It replaces the original Smith proposal to forbid the board from interfering when unions are in dispute over the proper collective bargaining unit.

Other provisions in the bill which passed yesterday include:

Elimination of the board's division of economic research, headed by David J. Saposs, accused of radicalism in Smith Committee hearings.

A "free speech" section permitting employers to talk to their employes on union affairs: if there is no coercion.

Limitation to one year of back pay collectible from employers guilty of illegal discrimination (the time limit was changed from six months on request of Green).

Requirement that the alleged unfair labor practice must have taken place within six months of the complaint.

Refusal of the right of reinstatement to employes who have engaged in violence.

Court review of board decisions in representation cases.

A clause that board findings of fact shall be conclusive in the courts unless they are "clearly erroneous" or "not supported by substantial evidence."

A proposed revision of the Wagner Act's declaration of policy and a proposed definition of collective bargaining were both knocked out of the Smith bill at Green's request.

'War Hysteria' Condemned at Rally Here; Wheeler Hits Sale of Army Guns to Allies

Norman Thomas Uurges U. S. Camps For War Refugees

Condemnation of "war hysteria" and defense policies "that pave the way for American intervention in European fighting" was voiced last night by leaders of Congressional, labor, student and women's groups at an antiwar mass meeting of 1,100 at the Raleigh Hotel.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, expressed the theme of the evening when he said, "A mad hysteria grips many of our people—a hysteria created in New York and in the City of Washington."

The Montana Senator was cheered for several minutes when he declared: "We are told that Europe is on fire—that we should help put out this fire before the wind shifts and the fire reaches us. I want to do everything to help the Allies stamp out the brutal forces which seek to dominate Europe and perhaps the world . . . but setting the United States on fire will not help put out the fire in Europe."

Raps Sales to Allies

Wheeler urged strengthening of national defenses sufficiently for "any eventuality," but struck at Administration proposals to sell the Allies supplies of rifles, 75-millimeter guns and ammunition "officially described as obsolete."

"Bearing in mind that we are presently engaged in a race to rearm our country and bolster our own national defenses—it may seem inconsistent to some that we should be shipping these munitions out of the country," the Presidential possibility declared.

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for the Presidency, urged the establishment of camps in this country to care for European refugees.

He warned against "hysterical armament economics . . . unnecessary for the protection of our homes," and declared American civil liberties had already been infringed upon by "war hysteria."

Legion "Against War"

O. K. Armstrong, member of the foreign relations committee of the American Legion, was applauded when he declared "98 per cent of the veterans of the other war are solidly for peace . . . The American Legion has enlisted against war."

Others urging American avoidance of involvement abroad included Dorothy Detzer, executive secretary of the Women's International League, and W. Luscum Borden, associate editor of the Yale Daily News.

At an afternoon session delegates unanimously approved a resolution urging Congress remain in session and advocating a Nation-wide referendum before declaration of war by this country.

Administration Blamed

Six speakers opening the Conference on Constitutional Liberties in America at the National Press Club auditorium last night agreed in condemning the Administration for engendering war hysteria, J. Edgar Hoover for restricting civil liberties and Attorney General Jackson for not halting his activities.

Merle D. Vincent, temporary chairman of the conference, introduced by Prof. Robert K. Speer, of New York University, chairman, as "100 per cent American," delivered the address of welcome. He said the conference should insist on "a Government so powerful it can preserve constitutional liberties" and declared military control of industry would retard rather than speed production.

The Rev. Owen A. Knox, president of the Civil Rights Federation of Michigan, described the FBI raids on homes of persons indicted for procuring recruits for the Spanish Loyalists. He declared, "Nothing illustrates better the danger in which we stand than the change in the attitude of the Administration toward the Dies Committee."

Other speakers were James Dombrowski, of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare; Harold J. Pritchett, president of the International Woodworkers of America, and Miss Pearl M. Hart, of Chicago, chairman of the civil liberties committee of the National Lawyers Guild.

Kingan Choral Society and Apollo Male Chorus give their first spring concert Friday night in Woodrow Wilson High School auditorium. Director, Harlan Page; guest soloist, Ina Holtzscheiter; accompanists, Carita Page, Margaret Johnson and Marjorie Davis.

Two organizations of young singers, the Kingan Choral Society of women's voices and the Apollo Male Chorus, made their debut last evening in Woodrow Wilson High School auditorium under the direction of Harlan Page. Fresh voices and a zestful spirit imparted a pleasurable quality to the singing which showed evidence of good training in attack, phrasing and dynamic shading. Inasmuch as music is obviously for these young men and women an incentive to study, they may congratulate themselves on the results of their faithful rehearsals. Here is a foundation for a community chorus which one would like to see growing in numbers.

BROWN

The two groups joined forces in the opening number of the program, "Come, Gentle Spring," from Haydn's "The Creation," and in the closing selection, an arrangement of Rasbach's "Trees." They were heard together also in two of Stephen Foster's songs, "My Old Kentucky Home" and "Old Black Joe."

The male chorus contributed Mallory's "Love's Old Sweet Song," Stephen Foster's "The Old Folks at Home," Smith's "Far Above Cayuga's Waters," Charles Zimmerman's "Anchors Aweigh" and O'Keefe's "Sing Me a Chanty." The women's group chose for their separate appearance Nicholas Douty's "A Sing of Joy" and Romberg's "Will You Remember."

Ina Holtzschelter, one of our most talented lyric sopranos, gave her encouragement to the youthful ensembles by appearing as their guest soloist. With commendable attention to native composers, she selected for her two groups American songs only by Mary Howe, Winter Watts, Paul Nordoff, Richard Hageman, Michael Head and John Alden Carpenter.

Edward A. Carey conducts the Printers Glee Club in its first annual spring concert Friday night in the Typographical Temple. Guest soloist, Frances Thatch; club soloists, Raymond Hawk, George W. Davis and Dale Jackson. Accompanist, Dale Jackson.

Under the direction of Edward A. Carey, the newly organized Printers Glee Club made its first appearance last evening in the Typographical Temple. It would be surprising indeed if there were not among the members of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, many men who enjoy the relaxation of music, and the 17 who sang together on this occasion are doubtless the nucleus for a larger chorus. There was certainly a fine spirit of enjoyment in their singing which communicated itself to those who listened.

Mr. Carey has done well in integrating the group and balancing the voices, and the responsiveness of the singers was evidence of their cooperative interest. They sang with fervor and with expressiveness, and there was a pleasurable tang in their intonation. Their selections were Taylor's "Down by the Old Mill Stream," David Guion's "Home on the Range," Geible's "Kentucky Babe," Speiser's "The Merry Frogs" and Van Alstyne's "Memories."

Two of the first tenors, Raymond Hawk and George W. Davis, contributed solos, the former singing Stephen Foster's "I Dream of Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair," and the latter Sanderson's "Friend o' Mine" and Schubert's "Serenade." A quartet composed of Mr. Davis, William R. Perry, Robert Merkle and Charles Merkle offered the Negro spiritual, "I've Been Listening."

Miss Frances Thatch, of The Washington Post, was the guest soloist and her one group—Ernest Charles, "Sweet Song of Long Ago" and Friml's "Indian Love Call"—had to be supplemented by an extra song. Her voice has a pleasurable quality in its clear and even tone, and she phrases with a musical instinct.

Dale Jackson, the club accompanist, made two appearances on the program as a dexterous soloist in Beethoven's "Fuer Elise," Rakhmaniov's C sharp minor prelude and Liszt's third "Liebestraum."

'Us Fellows Think Wilson, Hes Policeman, Must Be Best Dad'

The sentiments expressed in letters responding to The Post's quest of Washington's typical father give the lie, but emphatically, to any and all beliefs that dad is unappreciated and without admirers.

"If I can be half as worthy of praise as my dad is, I'll accomplish wonders . . . he gets me a lot of toys at Christmas and takes me on hikes over week-ends . . . what I love most of all about him is his kindness, consideration and extravagant generosity . . . our friends and neighbors say that he is 1 out of 1,000 that does what he does for three children."

Those are excerpts from four letters, selected at random, which have been sent to the Father's Day editor, each writer certain that his or hers is the best pops in the land.

Policeman Wins Hearts

A policeman, identified only as Wilson, was nominated yesterday by a Peabody School boy, identified only as Johnie (sic). Here is Johnie's letter, just as he scrawled it:

"I live with my uncle, but a lot of us fellows think Wilson—he's the policemen who we like best of enyone must be the best father in this great land. Maybe his own kids are too little to apreciate their dad, but we sure love him lots and believe me we sure wish you put his pichure in the paper.

"My friend his father owns the grocery on B and C NE says I wish Wilson is on duty today. Hes at Stanton Park noons so we eat lunch fast. Well enyway hes the best policemen in the world well say."

William F. Austin, 1310 Longfellow street northwest, is the entry of his 3-year-old twin daughters, Patsy Lee and Billy Austin, who were born on Father's Day—June 20—in 1937.

Explaining that "our mommy is helping us write this letter," Patsy Lee and Billy Austin say they think their dad is ace high because "he plays with us in the water, teaches us stunts, takes us for rides in the car to the Zoo and the beach, treats us as pals and, if every boy and girl's dad had the smile our dad has, there would be more sunshine in their homes."

Wednesday Night Deadline

Young Tom and Carl Burriss, of Bethesda, Md., chant their praise of a father (C. Earl Burriss) because "he knows where the best swimming holes are and the best places to fish or to play ball and to hike and always takes us hunting with him."

Mrs. Helen B. and Frederick Plitt, mother and son, agree unanimously that the head of their home in Chevy Chase, Md., Karl Plitt, is the answer to The Post's quest of the Capital's ideal father. Why? Because he is a genial host, gets along superbly with his mother-in-law, is a faithful churchgoer and—well, because "he is really a perfect father."

Wednesday midnight is the deadline for entries in The Post's "typical father" competition. Address letters to the Father's Day Editor. The winner will be announced on Father's Day June 16.

Pupils Unite To Aid Drive Of Red Cross

Roosevelt Students Volunteer to Help D. C. Meet Quota

A Roosevelt High School volunteer force will augment the regular Red Cross corps in its effort to raise a $300,000 war relief fund in the District.

Forming their own organization, students of the school yesterday voted to stage special events every day next week to obtain at least $500 for the fund. A special edition of the school paper will be devoted to the Red Cross cause.

Meanwhile through the already established channels poured an additional $14,145.51 yesterday for the District's total that is now past the halfway mark. Yesterday's contributions raised the total to $168,935.66.

Two unusual gifts marked the day's receipts. A check for $10 made out to Elizabeth Hanlon, of Trinity College, and indorsed by her to the Red Cross, was won by Miss Hanlon in an essay contest sponsored by the Catholic Conference on Family Life.

A group of young girls came to the Chapter House, 1730 E street northwest, bringing $19.75, proceeds of a show that they staged recently. They announced themselves as the "Jolly Pals and Red Cross Helpers."

Gifts of less than $1 are acceptable to the District of Columbia Chapter, American Red Cross, in its war relief campaign, Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, U. S. A., retired, chairman of the chapter, said yesterday. His statement was in response to the inquiry of a visitor who said that many persons wanted to give, but could not afford a dollar.

"Any size of gift is acceptable," the general said. "We want the small as well as the large gifts until our quota of $300,000 is raised."

Irwin Estate Nearly $200,000

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, June 7.—The estate of Mrs. Maria E. Irwin, of 2126 Connecticut avenue northwest, Washington, was appraised here today for transfer tax purposes at $196,104 gross and $165,842 net. Mrs. Irwin, who died June 17, 1939, in Washington, was the widow of Brig. Gen. Leroy Irwin, U. S. A. The bulk of her estate was in securities valued at $179,354.

Making one specific bequest of $600, Mrs. Irwin bequeathed the residue of her estate to her children, Mrs. Josephine I. Wright, of Fort Bragg, N. C., who receives one-half, and Lieut. Col. Leroy Irwin, also of Fort Bragg, and John D'Arcy Irwin, of 1316 New Hampshire avenue northwest, Washington, who each receive one-fourth. Each of the children also receives personal and household effects and a one-third interest in their mother's trust account in the Knickerbocker Chocolate Co., the value of which is undetermined.

Senor Sario Arrives in Town With a Dream Worth $36,000

SENOR ANTON SARIO—"I always paint the peons or the aristocracy—never the middle classes," said the Mexican artist

Leaves 12 Portraits of Typical Mexican Indians at Pan American Union—Result Of 15 Years' Work; Yes, He Says It's Hot Here

Senor Anton Sario, the Mexican painter and world traveler, arrived in town yesterday, his dream of 15 years completed and his esteem for Washington weather shattered.

Concerning the latter, he extemporized in his air-conditioned hotel suite last night eloquently on the District's famed humidity and general furnace-like temperatures. "In my Mexico City—there it is always cool," he remarked.

Reminded of the former, Senor Sario pointed proudly to a thin, locked wooden cabinet. In it were 12 portraits, all done in pastel and each the result of three months' continuous work plus a small fortune in semiofficial bribes.

They portrayed typical members of Mexico's Indian races, several of which are now practically extinct, and form the only such collection in existence. The result of 15 years of roaming over Mexico, mostly by mule power, the pictures are done in microscopic detail and measure about 3 by 4 feet.

Senor Sario arrived in this country a month ago with his paintings, some concern over the growth of German organizations in his beloved Mexico, decided opinions about the damnable effects of the European war, no interest in Mexican politics and much enthusiasm over Mexican Indians.

He knows United States Ambassador to Mexico Josephus Daniels well and still has an unfilled order to do a portrait of Mrs. Daniels. Notables he has painted include government heads and officials in Brazil, Argentina, England, France, Spain, Latvia, South Africa, etc.

"I always paint the peons or the aristocracy—never the middle classes," he remarked, with an accent evidently composed of all his seven languages.

The senor has been around. His briefest trip was one to Portugal, where he was met by an over-nosey customs official. "He wanted to look at all my sketches and baggage, which I did not like, so I left the country the next day," he reminisced.

Senor Sario is fond of this country, with the definite exception of New York City. "But always I get sick for Mexico and must go back to her."

He expects to leave his Indian paintings with the Pan American Union. Their value he places roughly at $3,000 each.

After visiting some friends near—but not in—New York, Senor Sario plans to catch the next train back to his bachelor's quarters in Mexico City. This he recommends to everyone not fortunate enough to live below the Rio Grande.

Civic Club Diners Hear Hedstrom On Youth Care

The banquet of the Lincoln Civic Association was held last night at the Francis Junior High School. The principal address was made by Harold Hedstrom, superintendent of the National Training School for Boys, who discussed adolescent problems.

Other speakers included Thomas J. Anderson, assistant director of recreation; Dr. G. C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of schools; Charles M. Thomas, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, and Dr. C. Herbert Marshall, president of the Rock Creek Civic Association.

Problems of the Lincoln and Rock Creek associations in education and housing were discussed by Dr. Edward F. Harris, president of the former association, in an annual message.

Survey Explodes 'Weaker-Sex' Idea Among Infants

Girl babies have a better chance for survival than males.

Proportionately, no more deaths occur among unmarried mothers than among the married, though infants born to the former do not fare as well.

The first 24 hours after birth is the most dangerous period for the newborn.

Those are some of the conclusions of a study of more than 250,000 deliveries in New York State, exclusive of New York City, during the three-year period 1936-38 and which was reported yesterday by the United States Public Health Service.

Civil Service Bill Backed By Roosevelt

Passage of Ramspeck Measure Urged; Sen. Bulow Skeptical

President Roosevelt was reported yesterday to have urged passage of the Ramspeck Civil Serivce bill at this session of Congress.

It was learned that the President discussed the bill with Chairman Bulow of the Senate Civil Service Committee, when the latter called at the White House yesterday with former Senator Herbert Hitchcock, of South Dakota.

Senator Bulow said that President Roosevelt had expressed interest in the bill, but added that they had not discussed the measure in detail.

The Ramspeck measure, which would permit bringing 100,000 or more Government employes into the classified civil service, has been awaiting executive action of the Senate committee since their hearings ended April 30.

Senator Bulow said that prospects of getting the bill out on the Senate floor "don't look so good to me." He said that committee action on the bill would wait until the defense program is out of the way.

He added, however, that he would confer again with members of the committee next week to find a possible time for meeting to consider the Ramspeck measure.

Earlier efforts to get the committee together were blocked when several members reported that they were tied up with other committees meeting on the defense program.

D. C. Artist Held Without Bail In N. Y. Shooting

New York, June 7.—Cecil W. Mayo, 28-year-old Washington, D. C., newspaper artist who came to New York to seek a reconciliation with his 21-year-old wife and ended up Thursday by allegedly shooting Miss Laurabella Andrews in the apartment she shared with Mrs. Mayo, was held without bail for further hearing Friday when he was arraigned today in felony court, Brooklyn. Registered by police as John Mayo, he said the shooting occurred accidentally when he tried to prevent Miss Andrews from calling police in an argument with his wife. He was charged with felonious assault.

Mrs. Mayo, under her maiden name of Joan Vest, is a waitress at the World's Fair. Miss Andrews, also 21 and a World's Fair waitress, was reported in "good" condition today in Long Island College Hospital. She was shot in the chest.

German Youth, 24, Must Leave U. S.

Police last night absolved Franz Karl Beub von Breisach, 24-year-old artist and an admitted stowaway from his native Germany, of possible "fifth column' connections, and left his fate in the hands of immigration authorities. He was held, however, at the Third Precinct Station.

Bureau of Immigration agents, who conducted an investigation yesterday, said they had not decided what action to take against Breisach, but a spokesman for the Labor Department said the youth, who has been living at 1718 I street northwest, was under orders to vacate the country "at his own expense by August 1."

Fred Prud'Homme, Retired Treasury Employe, Dies

Flood Inundates Stores, 100 Houses In Nebraska Town

Wauneta, Nebr., June 7 (AP).—More than 100 homes and the business district of this southwest Nebraska town were under water tonight as it felt the full force of flood waters surging down Frenchman Creek.

It was the hardest hit town thus far in the Republican River Valley area, where the river ran bank full, as its rain-swollen tributaries poured into it, leaving flooded towns and crumbling dams in their wake.

The town's hospital was inundated, and an emergency hospital was set up.

The railroad station offers the only source of pure water, since its facilities are separate from the municipal plant.

Nazi Tank Strength, Believed 4,000 Units, Held Key to Success in Great Somme Drive

Hitler Shock Troops Fight Like 'Doped' Dervishes, Foes Say

By G. H. Archambault.

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, June 7.—On the answer to two questions may depend the issue of the battle now in progress. How many tanks have the Germans left? How far have they engaged their reserves? Various guesses may be made but they must remain guesses. Possibly the reply to the first question may be easier than that to the second.

Competent circles estimate that at the beginning of May the Germans had ten armored divisions aggregating some 5,000 tanks of all sizes. It is estimated also that during the battle of Flanders some 2,000 were put out of commission, some destroyed completely, others susceptible of repair.

Of the latter it may be accepted that it has been possible to recuperate a fair number, say 1,500, including replacements from factories. Moreover, the division which operated in Holland should be available now; its losses in any case were relatively small. On the basis of these calculations the enemy probably had between four and five thousand tanks to launch into the fray. Yesterday it hazarded nearly one-half. This fact is considered yet another indication of the German desire—if not the necessity—to end the campaign in quick order.

Claim Half Destroyed

The French claim that several hundred of the tanks engaged yesterday were destroyed and that the process of rounding up infiltrations continues. One thing is certain: To meet the enemy's tactics the French have developed tactics of their own. For instance, when a column is seen advancing, the defending antitank crews hold their fire until the Germans are deploying—as a rule, at 70-yard intervals. At that precise moment they are raked with broadsides, generally to good effect. In addition, specially trained airmen have now been formed into "assault units," which concentrate on the destruction of tanks either by dive bombing or by close-range fire from automatic cannon. Attention has been drawn already to the great efficiency of the 75-millimeter field gun in halting tanks.

The consumption of "human material" is more difficult to compute. Reports come today from the Swiss border that many troops held in reserve in the region of the Black Forest have been moved to the front. However that may be, it is certain that the best German infantry formations have suffered very severe casualties since May 10. These are the "Howling Devishes"—the name given them by the French soldiers who have fought them.

Like "Fuzzy-Wuzzies"

These troops—for the most part motorized infantry following up the wake of Panzer-divisions—consist almost entirely of young, fanatical Nazis. Their mode of combat is reminiscent of the Fuzzy Wuzzies who gave the British so much trouble in the Sudan. This correspondent has been able to meet officers and men temporarily back from the front; all their accounts tally. The young Nazi shock troops, frequently mere boys, come to the attack in serried rows and with linked arms bellowing "Heil Hitler," and empty their guns without even taking aim. As one French soldier put it, "All you have to do is to hold your ground and let fly into the mass. They must be doped to act like that." All who have been at the front say "They must be doped," but this is no proof. Rather are they dervishes indeed, doped with fanaticism. The story is told of one such German lad dying in a hospital. He motioned for something out of his pocketbook. The nurse produced a photograph of a family group but the man shook his head. Then she produced a picture of Hitler. He nodded and smiled.

With these troops the German tactics are simple: Rush headlong anywhere and everywhere; if there is resistance fall back and try somewhere else.

Virginia Gets Title To Route 1 in Quantico

President Roosevelt yesterday signed a bill authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to convey to the State of Virginia the title to the right of way of the Washington-Richmond (No. 1) highway within the boundaries of the Marine Corps reservation at Quantico, Va.

The legislation was necessary because of a Virginia law which prohibits the State from maintaining roads to which they do not have the right of way title.

while, was bearing the weight of Britain's support for her French ally until new land divisions can be formed and equipped for the conflict on the Somme.

The air ministry reported almost continuous air assaults since yesterday on German communications to hamper the Nazi drive into France.

Military sources viewed the Allied status in France as "pretty good," but wondered whether the main German attack yet had been made.

The loss of 10 British planes was acknowledged, but the ministry declared 15 German aircraft had been shot down.

Railways, bridges, troops, gun emplacements, tank columns and oil refineries were "systematically and repeatedly bombed" by the British behind the Somme front, in France and in northwest Germany.

The British reported they had dropped 70 bombs on a big refinery south of Hamburg, setting great fires there, and also on a large oil storage plant near Delinenhorst.

Their bombs smashed one end of a tunnel south of Aachen, blocking the main railway.

Raid Ghent Depot Again

The British raiders also set new fires at a previously-bombed oil depot at Ghent and plowed into German-held airdromes at Arras and Norderney.

The bomb-aimer on one plane said he dropped a salvo right amid 20 German trucks in a column moving toward the front.

On the home front, the British protection forces set themselves for an expected third night of German raids against the airdromes from which British warplanes were harassing the German drive and against industries humming at top speed to replace equipment and munitions lost in Flanders.

Sir John Anderson, minister of home defense, issued a call for thousands of civil workers and in a nationwide broadcast asked everyone in Britain to "learn the rules of Air Raid Precautions."

The minister called for volunteer police, fire, air raid precaution workers and nurses to register immediately.

He said his powers under the defense act enabled the government to compel the nation's subjects to participate in such work but that he believed it should be voluntary.

Sea Curfew Established

To guard against a night invasion by sea the admiralty established a 3-mile curfew zone all around the United Kingdom. All ships were forbidden to enter that zone between sunset and sunrise except in organized convoys.

Lord Beaverbrook, minister of aircraft, declared that Britain had kept ahead of her losses in the Flanders fight and now has put into production the 'largest bomber in the world.'

Since May 11 the British aircraft output had been 63 per cent more planes and 33 per cent more engines, he said.

Allies Yield Ground Dearly on Somme

Hitler Weather

For the twenty-ninth successive day of the campaign on the Western Front and the third day of this battle the weather favored Hitler. It was clear and hot and there was no sign tonight of a break.

The Germans were estimated to have another 2,000 tanks in reserve, with their total force originally 4,000, waiting to drive through any gap in the French lines.

But with Weygand himself at the front, the French troops were carrying out orders to stick to support posts to the end, raining artillery and anti-tank gun fire on the tanks from all sides, while planes bombed and shelled them from above.

Besides directing the battle in person, Weygand, one of the 40 immortals of the French academy and historian of the French army, is writing the two daily communiques himself.

His order for the first day of battle, telling his men to "look only forward" and "hold tight to the soil of France," was published today. Last night's communique, in superb prose, vaunted the morale of his troops.

He has adapted his army, once hailed as the best in the old world, to defense against Germany's new mechanized warfare, and he has shown that the Reichswehr's rush can be checked.

Back of his deep Somme-Aisne line, itself a quagmire of staggered support points to that trap and smash the German tanks, Weygand has sown the 50-mile-deep area clear to the Seine with antitank defense nests.

The roads are barricaded and there are strong support points armed both with antitank guns and machine guns.

Army mechanized units which get through the front lines thus will run almost a continuous gantlet of hot defensive fire all the way to Paris.

While the battle of France went on in all its fury, the Germans sent 200 planes today into central France.

They passed around Paris while air raid sirens howled, then flew on south. An official announcement, later, said they did "material damage" in an unspecified central section.

Paris itself lies within 70 miles of the battle zone.

The active battle zone stretches from the Channel to the war-trampled ridges of the Chemi-des-Dames between the Ailette and the Aisne rivers, some 125 miles in all.

France's government maintained its confidence.

Premier Reynaud told the Senate army commission there was reason for this confidence, in the "development of operations now under way."

House Unit Votes For Tax Rises

Under the proposed bill, single men earning $30 a week might have to pay a Federal income tax of $5.44 a year.

The 1 per cent increase in corporation rates is expected to raise $70,000,000 a year; and the lowering in personal exemptions and increase in surtaxes will yield $252,000,000. When the 10 per cent supertax is added to these figures, a total of $354,000,000 annually will be raised by the new schedules.

Coupled with the estimated $652,000,000 from the supertax and boosted excise taxes in the Doughton bill introduced last week, the grand total from the new revenue measure is expected to reach $1,006,000,000 a year.

The draft bill would require the filing of income-tax returns by all persons with a gross income of $2,000 if married, and $800 if single—thus raising the number of returns from the present number of 7,500,000 (of whom half pay taxes) to some 16,000,000 individuals (of whom about 6,000,000 will pay taxes).

According to the proposed corporation tax schedule, firms with a net taxable income up to $5,000 will pay 12½ instead of 12½ per cent; from $5,000 to $20,000, 15 instead of 14 per cent; from $20,000 to $25,000, 17 instead of 16 per cent, and from $25,000 up, 19 instead of 18 per cent.

Rates to Stand

As to individual income taxes, the present basic rate of 4 per cent will be retained—but will begin at $2,000 (married) and $800 (single) instead of $2,500 and $1,000. The present exemption of $400 per dependent will remain in the new bill.

Under the proposed rates, the income tax on a married man with no dependents earning $3,000 a year would be $30.80 annually instead of $8, as at present. For a married man with no dependents earning a gross of $4,000, the new levy would be $70.40, compared with the present tax of $44.

Consequently, in the $3,000 class, the increase of the new bill would amount to 375 per cent, and in the $4,000 group, the increase would be about 62 per cent.

Seven-Day Week in Arsenals

Maj. Gen. Charles M. Wesson, chief of Army ordnance, revealed that a seven-day week is to be gradually introduced in governmental arsenals to accelerate production of arms and ammunition.

President Roosevelt gave stimulus to proposals for institution of compulsory military training by praising an editorial advocating such a preparedness move.

The Navy sent the heavy cruiser Wichita to South American ports, following in the wake of the cruiser Quincy which left a week ago. Announced as "good-will cruises" they are unofficially admitted to have been ordered because of unrest in several localities.

President Roosevelt announced he had named a committee to study and recommend means of consolidating Government purchasing. The committee is headed by Edward R. Stettinius, jr., member of the advisory defense commission, and has as its other members Rear Admiral Ray Spear, Brig. Gen. C. T. Harris and Donald Nelson, director of the Treasury Procurement Division.

The President also said that hysteria about shortages of rubber, tin and manganese were unfounded and that the situation was well in hand. He said consideration was being given to recovery of scrap steel and scrap rubber.

President Roosevelt announced at his press conference that he had asked Congress for authority to turn in old guns for new models. Such authority now exists for planes and ammunition, he stated, but guns can only be disposed of by outright sale. Senate leaders have been asked to incorporate the authorization in a bill now before the chamber.

Under existing law, the President stated, the surplus guns can be sold but the money paid for them reverts to the Treasury. By "turning in" the old equipment, the Army will later receive modern up to date weapons at a considerable saving, it was said.

"Subterfuge," Says G. O. P.

This proposed legislation, however, other officials stated, involves only the method of paying for the guns. Deliveries of the surplus arms stocks are already being made to the U. S. Steel Corporation. If the President's proposal is adopted, the latter company will deliver new arms to the Goverment, if not it will pay for them in cash.

The steel company, it was said, probably will order the arms from other munitions companies.

Government circles declared the sale of the planes and arms to the Allies did not involve a violation of Article 6 of the Hague Convention of 1907. This bars the sale of arms to a belligerent by the Government, but not individuals or companies of neutrals. Some Republicans, however, termed the sale or "turn in" of the arms to private companies and their resale to the Allies a "mere subterfuge."

"Hell Bet" for War

Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, declared the move was "the last step that can possibly be taken before being involved in the war." Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, charged the plan is "hypocrisy and back-door strategy" and asserted that "some persons in the Administration are 'hell bent' to get us involved in this war."

Representative Vorys (Republican), of Ohio, asked if "obsolete soldiers" might not also be sent to the aid of the Allies.

Speaker Bankhead expressed his approval, declaring it a "mighty good program," and Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee, indorsed the move.

President Roosevelt at his press conference pointed out that the guns which would be disposed of are out of date, having been manufactured in the World War. He said the Army had sold obsolete equipment for years, wherever the best sale could be made. He made no reference to the fact the arms are to be resold to the Allies.

Ruling Supports Move

Questioned about the 50 naval planes which have been returned to the Curtiss Aircraft Co. for sale to the Allies, Mr. Roosevelt said planes such as these without self-sealing gas tanks and armor plate are not of the latest design. The craft in question are less than 2 years old.

Backing up the Administration's decision to dispose of the surplus arms which Great Britain and France are arranging to buy is an opinion of Acting Attorney General Francis Biddle holding that "deteriorated and unserviceable" ammunition may be turned in for new ammunition and that other War Department goods declared "surplus" can be sold without advertising.

The President's comment on compulsory military training aroused some speculation that he may have some such program in mind. The reaction on Capitol Hill was divided, with Senators George (Democrat), of Georgia, and Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, favoring such training and Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, against it.

U. S. Opinion May Demand War, British Paper Says

London, June 7 (AP).—The Yorkshire Post, influential northern newspaper which often has been called the mouthpiece of War Minister Anthony Eden, will say tomorrow that responsible American opinion soon may come to believe that the United States should declare war on Germany.

This opinion, the newspaper predicted, will want to "give the utmost moral weight to America's condemnation of the foul ideas of conquest that Hitler is rushing into effect."

Second Cruiser Speeds to Rio As Reports of Nazi Action Grow

U. S. Ships Will Call On Other Ports For 'Friendly Visits'

Amid growing reports of Nazi activities in South America, a second United States warship yesterday was ordered to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and other ports for "friendly visits."

The heavy cruiser Wichita will follow the cruiser Quincy, already on her way to the same general area.

Each ship carries four fighting planes, 40 marines and around 550 sailors.

There was little effort here to conceal official feeling that presence of the warships would have considerable psychological effect in support of constituted governments combating "fifth column" activities, reported to have been intensified since Germany's recent territorial gains in Europe.

While there was some talk of the possibility of reestablishing the United States Navy's South Atlantic Squadron as the result of totalitarian encroachments in South American countries, officials said such action was not immediately contemplated.

Future steps are dependent, it was frankly admitted, on developments abroad.

Venezuela, Colombia, Brazil and Uruguay are reported to be encountering increased efforts by Germans and Italians to extend their influence.

Presence of the two 10,000-ton cruisers is expected to have something of a "stabilizing effect" among South American governments troubled by such attempts. Each ship carries nine 8-inch guns and eight 5-inch antiaircraft guns.

Mobile Units Force British Back Slightly

Close Battle Rages On Channel Flank Of Weygand Line

By Ned Russell
United Press Staff Writer

London, June 7.—Waves of German infantry attacking with motorized machine-gun units have forced British troop back slightly along the Channel flank of the Weygand line where soldiers battled hand-to-hand beneath a scorching sun, an official statement said tonight.

An official eyewitness account from the British "advance battle headquarters on the Somme front" said that British tanks were hurled into the battle Thursday in an effort to halt the Nazi push southward from the Somme.

Earlier official accounts had told of the British defenders being pushed back to the Bresle River, about 17 miles south of Abbeville, by the furious Nazi assaults.

Thursday, it was said, the Germans augmented their infantry assaults with motorized machine-gun units and forced the British, who were "fighting magnificently against heavy odds, to withdraw their front slightly more.

"The fighting at many points was of the most open kind, with many men firing from ditches, bushes and other rough cover," tonight's eyewitness account said.

"Once again the battle raged all day in the heat of a scorching sun.

"The sight of our tanks roaring across the fields and appearing from the edge of a green wood greatly heartened the men, who cheered when the tanks opened fire against the enemy with quick-firing guns from their turrents," the account said.

"German aerial activity was not so intense today as usual.

"German prisoners captured by the British told a story of great hardship on the way to the front," the account said.

"One said: 'We marched about 30 miles daily, and arrived on the Somme only the day before we were thrown into battle. When we arrived we were exhausted.'

"None of the men had taken part in any previous action, while some of the British regiments had been fighting almost continuously for more than a month."

"The Germans said that on the whole the army is well fed and looked after," the account said.

Paris Arms Garbage Trucks For Mobile Defense of City

Steel Posts Erected in Champs Elysees To Prevent Nazi Planes From Landing; Guards Roam With Machine Guns

By the Associated Press

Paris, June 7.—Steel posts rose menacingly tonight in the middle of the Champs Elysee . . . garbage trucks stood as mobile fortresses two or three to a block . . . a defense area heavy with machine gun and antitank gun nests stretched clear up to the battle line of the Somme.

But for these new preparations against invasion from the air or the ground, it was the Paris of 26 years ago, when another German army was thundering down from the north, and from this beloved capital thousands fled again, remembering the distant sound of older guns.

The great thick rods sticking like awkward growths in the Champs Elysee were intended to provide a fatal landing field for any German plane that might try to come down there.

In the trucks, as big as moving vans, silent men sat at machine guns, ready to move quickly to reinforce any barrier at the city's gates that might sway under an enemy pressure that may never come.

In the boulevards about the city rode special squads of motorcyclists, one hand on the steering bar and the other holding a machine gun.

But through it all, while the millions yet remaining keep watch hour on hour for the waving body of a parachutist floating down from aloft, quiet men still sat beneath the striped awnings of the sidewalk cafes.

It is not an end to conviviality, but rather an interruption. For, though the crowds are much smaller—the continuing police roundups of suspected fifth columnists have reduced the number of casual loungers—they still sip dreamily at the apertif hour.

To go out onto the country high ways, a man must have special papers—and he must show them promptly and with no nonsense to the soldier-guards who halt all traffic every few miles.

The blackout is much blacker; there are no laggard steps now when the sirens scream.

Thousands departing the city today crammed the stations and many waited hour upon hour for "the next train." Automobiles, trucks and taxis, swaying under heavy loads of suitcases and furniture and bedding, moved steadily to the southern gates.

Rabbi Silverstone Urges Allied Aid

Every means of American aid to the Allies, short of sending men, was urged last night by Rabbi Harry Silverstone, addressing his Tifereth Israel Congregation.

"Our duty in these ominous and fateful days is to protect the democratic way of life, the religious way of life, by helping the Allies, and at the same time building a better world," said he.

Rabbi Silverstone earlier offered special prayers for the Allied war victims, including refugees.

District Women To Aid Refugees

Wellesley, Mass., June 7 (AP).—An uncrystallized plan to turn college dormitories into "refugee hotels" during summer months for warring Europe's children was disclosed today by Mildred H. McAfee, president of Wellesley College.

She credited "an unofficial group of college women in Washington" with origin of the plan and called for student volunteers to aid in caring for the youngsters if it materialized.

James Hall, Former Screen Star, Dies

Jersey City, N. J., June 7 (U.P.)—James Hall, 39, former movie star who had met with reverses and had been appearing recently in small night clubs, died today at the Medical Center, which he entered May 28.

Hall had been living with his wife in a rooming house, whose operator said that Mrs. Hall had gone to live with relatives or friends in New York City after the actor was removed to the hospital.

U. S. Defense 'Fumbled,' Dewey Avers

Charges Roosevelt Misrepresents Status Of Preparedness

Charleston, W. Va., June 7 (U.P.)—Thomas E. Dewey, candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, charged tonight that the New Deal Administration has "fumbled with national defense just as it fumbled for seven years with national recovery."

Asserting the need for expanding industrial production to meet national defense needs, the New York County district attorney said that "fate leaves us for seven all-important months in the hands of men whose whole public life has been devoted to restricting our industrial output."

Dewey accused President Roosevelt of "resorting to subterfuge" in his May 26 fireside chat on national defense. Quoting the President as saying that "since 1933 we have actually purchased 5,640 airplanes" for the Army, Dewey asserted that "the truth is that the Army today has only 2,794 planes, of which only 863 are combat ships."

"And none of these planes," he continued, "measures up to the standards of present combat requirements. None of them has armor. None of them has self-sealing fuel tanks. And none of them has sufficiently heavy firing equipment. . . .

"At a time when the country wanted to hear the cold truth about our military preparedness, it received from its President only deceptive statements about equipment 'on hand and on order.' Equipment 'on order' is no equipment. An antiaircraft gun 'on order' will not bring down a bombing plane an enemy has 'on hand.'"

Taft Offers Program

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 7.—Campaigning for the Republican Presidential nomination, Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, tonight outlined a five-point national defense program, and called on President Roosevelt to renounce a third term in the interests of national unity.

The Roosevelt Administration, he asserted, has failed to provide the Nation with a safe financial program for preparedness and has substituted "mere announcements" for real expansion of industrial capacity to produce airplanes, guns and tanks.

Taft's national defense program was given as follows:

Take national defense out of politics; create a joint bipartisan Congressional defense committee to sit permanently in Washington; release private industry from what he regards as excessive regulation; establish an industrial munitions board headed by a single individual with authority to increase American production for national defense and to provide the Army and Navy with what they require; undertake immediate and complete revision of the tax structure in a pull-in-the-belt program to put national rearmament quickly on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Willkie Favors Principles

Lincoln, Nebr., June 7 (AP).—Wendell Willkie, Republican Presidential candidate, said here today principles of various New Deal agencies should be retained, but advocated "better administration" and more specific delegation of powers.

"Congress just got lazy and gave away too much power," he declared at a press conference. "What Congress should do now is to give each agency a rule book, with the powers specifically defined. If that were done, capital would begin to flow and the 10,000,000 unemployed could be put back to work."

Worth retaining in principle, he asserted, are the wage-hour law, labor relations act, and the Securities and Exchange Commission. He described the farm program as the "best temporary solution," adding it "shouldn't be changed unless a better plan is worked out."

Norse Embassy Celebrates 'Independence'

Morgenstierne Expresses Faith In Final Victory

The Norwegian Embassy put the realities aside yesterday on behalf of sentiment—and entertained in commemoration of the thirty-fifth anniversary of Norway as an independent kingdom.

The Norwegian King, Haakon VII, sent no message through the embassy to the peoples of Norwegian blood in America, but the embassy inferred his vigilance.

"He is still the sovereign of the part of Norway which has not been occupied by the German invaders," a formal statement said, with the declaration that "surely the sun will rise once again over a free and independent Norway."

The minister, Wilhelm Morgenstierne, invited the press to join the embassy staff in celebrating the anniversary. The minister, sitting among newspaper representatives in a paneled room, expressed confidence in ultimate Norwegian victory.

He recalled a Frenchman's saying that France would win because he believed in France. The Norwegian Minister said he believed Norway would win because he believed in God. A newspaperman ventured that God is supposed to be on the side of the heaviest artillery.

"Only temporarily," the Norwegian Minister observed, emphatically.

The Minister said that King Haakon and the Crown Prince are still in northern Norway with the troops. They are in good health, despite Nazi reports to the contrary, he said. The Minister said he was in almost daily contact with the King, government and Bank of Norway through radio communications.

The Norwegian army of the north consists of fewer than 10,000 men, a legation attache stated. They reminded that it is the only one of the smaller neutral nations attacked by Germany that still holds out.

Submarines Best Prepared, Says Admiral

Machine Tool Leaders Confident Of Meeting Needs

By the Associated Press

New London, Conn., June 7.—Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation of the Navy Department, asserted today that submarines were more ready for war than any other branch of the Naval Service.

Rear Admiral Nimitz told members of the Submarine School's graduating class here that surface vessels require more armament now and more protection of the superstructure, but there is little that would need be done or can be done to the submarine to make it ready for service.

He predicted that submarines will never be abolished either by peace treaties or limitation of armaments. Eighteen officers were graduated.

Tool Industry Confident

Worcester, Mass., June 7 (AP).—Howard W. Dunbar, one of five members of a machine tool industry committee working with William S. Knudsen, of the National Defense Commission, said today the industry "is in a position to turn out all the machines the Government needs."

Dunbar, a vice president of Norton Co., added in an interview that "ordinarily the annual volume of the industry is $160,000,000. At present it is working at an annual volume of $350,000,000. The Government is asking us to produce, on top of that, about $20,000,000 worth of equipment.

"It should be made clear the industry is not a bottle neck in the defense program.

"All we want to know is what the Government wants, when it wants it, and the industry will turn it out."

Dunbar, one of a group recently called to talk over defense problems with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, and Assistant Secretary of War Johnson, said the industry proposed no material new plant construction. Now idle buildings will be used, he said. He foresaw no serious shortage of skilled help.

Ship Workers Too Busy to Notice Liner's Launching

Newport News, Va., June 7 (AP).—To the static accompaniment of a thousand riveting machines, the hull of the liner President Jackson slid down the ways at the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. this morning almost without notice.

The handful of guests who gathered to see Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo smash a champagne bottle against the steamer's prow didn't interrupt the orderly activity in the seven other shipways alongside.

The liner is scheduled to be commissioned November 1, and six sister ships will be added at 60-day intervals. They are the President Monroe, President Hayes, President Van Buren, President Garfield, President Adams and President Polk, in that order.

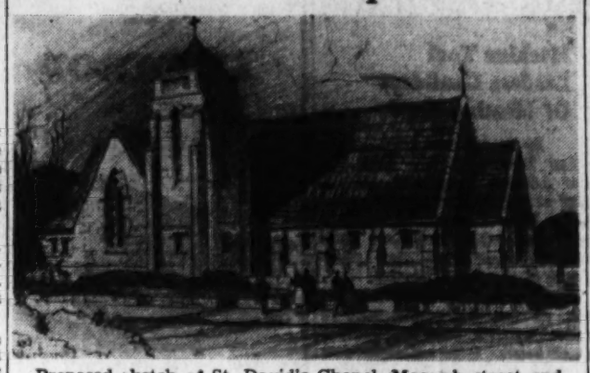
Church of the Week

Ground-Breaking About July 1 For St. David's Chapel



Proposed sketch of St. David's Chapel, Macomb street and Klingle road northwest, mission of St. Alban's Episcopal Church

By Robert Tate Allan

The enterprising congregation of St. David's Chapel, mission of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, will turn earth about July 1 for the first unit of its new church and educational building at Macomb streets and Klingle road northwest.

Located in the new development of Kent, the site was purchased about a year ago by the St. David's group, then worshiping in a chapel at Conduit road and Chain Bridge.

The project's first unit, comprising a nave and vicarage, will cost approximately $25,000, according to Dr. Charles T. Warner, rector of St. Alban's and moving spirit behind the progress of the mission, organized 40 years ago.

The first unit will be of rubble stone material like St. Alban's Church, Gothic styled and cruciform shaped with a seating capacity of 200. The basement will serve as a parish hall until later erection of another unit. Donald S. Johnson is architect.

With permission of the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, the cornerstone will probably be laid in September by the Right Rev. Norman S. Binsted, D. D., Bishop of Tohoku, Japan, and a product of St. David's Chapel.

Bishop Binsted attended the chapel as a young man, and from 1912 to 1915, while studying at Virginia Theological Seminary, conducted services at St. David's. He was consecrated to the bishopric in St. Alban's in 1928, and went to Japan in 1915.

The Rev. Spence A. Dunbar, formerly rector of Prince Georges Parish, Rockville, Md., assumed charge as vicar on April 1.

Pointing out the "marvelous opportunities" for another church in that area, Dr. Warner said there are approximately 800 homes between Georgetown, Glen Echo and Cabin John. Near the St. David's site are 20,000 square feet of land for potential residences.

The congregation of St. David's, meeting temporarily in the Field House on Sherrier place, has several enterprising organizations.

Among them are the recently organized Young People's Fellowship, of which Edward Staples is president; the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, led by Frank K. Sanderson; the Woman's Auxiliary, headed by Mrs. Robert Gordon, and the Sunday school, of which George C. Wells is superintendent.

Mrs. E. Staples and Mrs. William Gamble lead the Altar Guild, while L. B. Nye, jr., is choir organist, and Mrs. Staples acting choir mother.

Officers of the Auxiliary Vestry are A. McKenzie, junior warden; L. Bert Nye, jr., registrar; George C. Wells, treasurer, and E. R. Barnes, Charles Davis, T. E. Ferguson, F. H. Hill, E. H. Lowman, Mr. Nye, E. Staples and Mr. Wells are vestrymen. The senior warden's position is open at present.

The congregation last night sponsored a supper in Satterlee Hall on Mount St. Albans.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

Poetic tradition divides the honor for its composition between Ambrose and his convert, Augustine. Ambrose lifted his hands to heaven and chanted the first lines in a holy rapture. Augustine responded, and so stave by stave in alternating strains, sprang this standard hymn of Christian praise.

Woodring Acts to Reinforce Army Units Guarding Nation's Capital; Nearby Posts Will Be Expanded Under New U. S. Preparedness Program

Barracks Being Enlarged to House Additional Troops

Secretary of War Woodring announced yesterday the first of a series of steps to strengthen Army units guarding the Nation's Capital.

Under the plan, the first squadron of the Third Cavalry will be moved from Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., to Fort Myer, Va., where the remainder of the historic "Brave Rifles" have been stationed for many years. Construction of barracks is already started for the additional 215 troops who will move in when they are completed.

Also in view, it was learned, is an enlargement of the "President's Own"—the Twelfth Infantry at Arlington Cantonment, Va. Additional barracks are being constructed at the new post just across the Memorial Bridge, but there is no official word as to their occupants.

May Get Regiment

Army circles here, however, speculated that either the other battalion of the Twelfth Infantry will be moved here from Fort Howard, Md., that a battalion now inactive will be reestablished, or that both steps will be taken to give Washington a full Infantry regiment.

Under legislation now pending in Congress, the Army and National Park Service will take over the Department of Agriculture experimental farm, a part of which the Twelfth Infantry now occupies. A permanent Army post would be established there, with accommodations for additional troops.

Also reported to be under consideration is a plan whereby the Government would purchase the Washington Airport as an addition to the new post. Negotiations are said to be already under way for the purchase of the area when the National Airport at Gravelly Point is completed.

To Expand Force

War Department officials said completion of plans for expanding nearby Army posts depends upon action taken by Congress for increase in the Army. Funds for expanding the force from 227,000 to 280,000 are virtually assured, while there have been proposals that an even larger strength be provided.

Approved plans call for establishing a new streamlined infantry division at Fort George G. Meade, Md., when the additional men are available. Only part of the troops for the unit, however, would be allowed under the 280,000 total. Its establishment may require other shifts in the Army units of this area, it is said.

Movement of the cavalry squadron to Fort Myer will give that post a full horse regiment, plus one troop of the Tenth Cavalry (colored) and a battalion of the Sixteenth Field Artillery.

Annul Ties To Judge, Woman Asks

Rockville Suit States Hedrick Already Had Wife

A 29-year-old Government Printing Office employe has filed papers in Rockville, Md., Court seeking the annulment of an alleged marriage in 1935 to Judge Benjamin H. Hedrick, Ar- (Va.) trial justice, who already was married to Anna Elizabeth Einfeldt Hedrick, it was learned yesterday.

HEDRICK

Miss Annette Devlin, 4535 Avondale street, Bethesda, Md., said she was married to Hedrick August 15, 1935, in New Haven, Conn., and since learned the jurist had "a living wife whom he had married in 1920."

Mrs. Anna E. Hedrick, the wife referred to, won a limited divorce from Hedrick in Arlington County Circuit Court May 29. Charging desertion, she asserted Hedrick left her November 15, 1939. Until that time, the couple had lived together since marriage December 1, 1920, in Honolulu, T. H., she said.

Mrs. Hedrick was given custody of their twin children, Benjamin Sherwood and Betty Mace, who will be 13 tomorrow.

Miss Devlin yesterday refused to discuss the circumstances of the Judge Hedrick could not be reached for comment last night. At his mother's home, it was said he had "gone boating."

Americans Get Final Warning To Flee England

London, June 7 (INS).—United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy delivered a stern "last-time" warning to Americans in England tonight and told them flatly that those who remain after the sailing of the liner Washington—probably next week—will be staying at their own risk.

Kennedy minced no words in declaring that he thought it would be "extremely foolhardy for any Americans, particularly women and children, to remain here if it is not absolutely essential."

The liner Washington will sail from Galway, probably June 14, but it will be able to accommodate only about 1,000 Americans.

1,000 Middies Off on Cruise To Canal Zone

Third, First Classes Embark on 3-Month Practice at Sea

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., June 7.—More than 1,000 midshipmen left sweethearts and parents—the last remnants of June Week—in their wake today as they embarked on three battleships for their annual summer practice cruise.

Young and old women embraced white uniformed sweethearts and sons in the fleeting moments before midshipmen were ordered to march to the academy wharf, where they boarded motor launches for the trip to the battleships Texas, New York and Arkansas, anchored in the bay.

Though some hearts were heavy, young and old alike cheered the departing 669 third and 397 first classmen from walks adjacent to the academy sea wall.

Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, academy superintendent, took a group of parents out to the battle wagons aboard his yacht, the Anita Clay.

The battleships, under the command of Rear Admiral Hayne Ellis, will leave early tomorrow, arriving at Colon, Panama Canal Zone, June 15. Before returning August 28, the ships will go to Venezuela, Virgin Islands, Cuba and points along the Atlantic coast line.

Aboard the battleships were seven West Point cadets—Leon Bilstin, George L. Eckert, John W. Leonard, Daniel A. Raymond, Harold W. Rice, Francis E. Voegeli and William C. Warren. They were accompanied by Lieut. Col. C. H. Danielson, adjutant general's department, U. S. A.

Early Monday morning, the first three companies of the new second class will embark on several destroyers for coastal cruises. When they return sometime in July, the fourth, fifth and sixth companies of the class will make the trip.

Japanese Extremists Bid for Power

Kuhara Faction Asks More Vigorous War, Stiff Front to U. S.

By Hugh Byas
Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, June 7.—Attempts at reversing of Japan's present international policies came into the open today. Fusanosuke Kuhara, president of one of the factions into which the major political party, the Seyukai, has been split, leads the move. His three plank program is:

Alteration of the present foreign policy of subservience to the United States and Great Britain.

Vigorous measures to terminate the China war, including the invocation of belligerent rights, the withdrawal from China of all Franco-British forces, and maritime action east of Singapore against ships and cargoes of countries hostile to Japan.

An immediate increase in the number of planes, tanks and submarines.

Kuhara presented this platform to Premier Yonai yesterday demanding a definite answer at 11 o'clock today. At 11 o'clock the chief secretary of the cabinet telephoned to Kuhara that the premier had no reply to make. Kuhara instantly sent in his resignation as cabinet counsellor and disclosed his action to the press.

Kuhara has thus constituted himself as the leader of the extremists, and developments will depend upon the extent of the support he can attract, particularly in military circles. He has already obtained the cooperation of a majority of his own party and minor nationalist groups, including the "Social-Massites," but that is not enough for success. The cabinet will not fall unless it is undermined from within. Its weakness is that it has not achieved anything.

Relations with the United States are no better and talk of the machine tool embargo reminds the extremists that their supplies are still on a 24-hour basis.

The cabinet came to power on a platform of settling the China affair, and its policies still hang fire. The official scheme for establishing Wang Ching-wei, recognizing his government and making the peace treaty with Wang stands up like a monumental facade, but skepticism whether that facade will become a permanent structure cannot be entirely repressed.

Behind the official facade two alternatives are being discussed in whispers. Japan may throw away all hesitations and approach Gen. Chiang Kai-shek on the ground that he is the only Chinese who can make peace; or she can intensify efforts to subjugate him, and embark upon a political offensive against all countries who oppose her ambitions. Kuhara represents the latter school.

Kuhara began his move by opening a drive for the formation of a new party of totalitarian complexion. Efforts were made to obtain Prince Konoe, the former Japanese premier, as leader, but Konoe replied that new parties could not be created overnight. He added that while cooperation with the military was desirable, it was not necessary to heed every tune the military played.

Scott Paper Head to Aid U. S. Defense

Broadcasting Company Counsel Also Added To Advisory Board

Further additions to the staffs of the Advisory Defense Commission were announced yesterday as the seven members moved forward in their program to see that the Government's preparedness needs are met with the least possible upsetting of normal life.

Thomas B. McCabe, president of the Scott Paper Co. and chairman of the board of the Philadelphia Federal Reserve Bank, was named an assistant to Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., member of the commission charged with the obtaining and delivery of all materials for industrial production under the program.

Appointment of Paul Porter, counsel of the Columbia Broadcasting Co., to be executive assistant to Chester C. Davis, commission member who will handle all farm-defense problems, likewise was announced. He will maintain contact with such offices as those of the Secretary of Agriculture, Surplus Commodities Corporation, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, RFC and the Red Cross.

Miss Harriet Elliott, member of the commission responsible for consumer protection, will continue her active participation in the program this morning by presiding over a conference of about 50 Government officials whose duties involve various phases of consumer problems.

Efforts are to be made to utilize, rather than duplicate, the work already being done by Government agencies, she said, in her moves to guard consumers against undue increases in the cost of living as the defense effort progresses.

Miss Elliott will soon confer with consumer organizations' representatives, and with groups representing the retail trades.

The American Trucking Associations, Inc., yesterday pledged full support of its members to the defense commission. Action was taken here at a meeting of the executive committee, following a discussion of the part commercial trucks can play in the movement of war materials and supplies.

M'Kenzie King Hints U. S. Aid For Allies

Canada Accepts Churchill's Challenge, He Tells Dominion

By the Associated Press

Ottawa, June 7.—Prime Minister MacKenzie King, reminding Canadians "how earnestly and vigorously the President of the United States has spoken in the name of humanity," declared tonight that "if new enemies oppose us, we may be sure that old and new friends will arise to help us."

"The world-wide significance of the conflict is being realized in every land," the prime minister said in a radio address. "There has been mobilized in the cause of freedom, the conscience of the civilized world and tyranny will long remember the power of that conscience and the fatal effect of the world's condemnation upon the forces of evil."

Replying to British Prime Minister Churchill's challenge earlier this week to the New World—to carry on the fight should Britain and France suffer reverses, MacKenzie King said Canada would accept its new responsibility.

D. C. German-American Leader Forms Anti-Hitler Society

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, June 7.—Organization of a German American congress for democracy for American citizens of German descent who believe in American support for the Allies in the war with Chancellor Hitler was announced today by Dr. Frank Bohn, of Washington, D. C., at the office of the Roland German American Society here.

"The purpose," explained Dr. Bohn, who is a writer and lecturer, "is to appeal to all American citizens of German birth or of German descent to support the Government of the United States in its measures of national defense.

"We believe Hitler and Hitlerism are the greatest danger to western civilization since the Middle Ages. We would support the leadership of the Government. We favor every aid to the Allies that is required for their victory over Hitler."

Erwin H. Klaus, president of the Roland German American Society, announced this membership of 2,000 in New York City would affiliate with the new German congress.

The Roland Society was founded in 1930. It supported President Roosevelt in both the 1932 and the 1936 Presidential elections.

Would Be Nonpartisan

It was said, however, by both Bohn and Klaus that the proposed German congress would be nonpartisan, at least in the beginning.

Neither Dr. Bohn nor Klaus would estimate the number of Nazi and Communist sympathizers who might be participating in so-called fifth column activities. They did assert there was considerable Nazi money available for organization purposes in this country. They recalled estimates placing the membership of the German-American Bund at 20,000.

Klass said organized efforts were now in progress in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, California, Oregon and Washington. As soon as five State chapters have been organized it is intended to organize the congress on a national basis.

Son-in-Law of Roper

Dr. Bohn lives at 1901 Wyoming avenue northwest. He is the son-in-law of Daniel C. Roper, former Secretary of Commerce.

He has lectured in all parts of the country, and is the author of many newspaper and magazine articles on economics and international affairs. He is also author of a book, "The Great Change."

Unofficial Tally Indicates Baker Will Head I. T. U.

Indianapolis, June 7 (AP).—An unofficial summary of complete official return today showed reelection of Claude M. Baker, of San Francisco, as president of the International Typographical Union.

This summary, issued by Woodruff Randolph, secretary-treasurer, gave Baker 30,854 votes to 28,487 for his opponent, Francis G. Barrett, of New York City.

The unofficial totals show reelection of Randolph with 29,521 votes to 29,162 for John J. Conley, of Fort Worth, Tex., and election of Jack Gill, of Cleveland, as first vice president, and Thomas Holland, of Vancouver, British Columbia, as second vice president.

Others whose election was indicated by the unofficial tally:

Not All Gain

The stout resistance which the French have been putting up in the face of the latest German onslaught is all the more noteworthy in view of the appalling losses which they have suffered since May 10 not only in men and materiel but also in mineral wealth and industrial capacity.

A glance at the map shows that German occupation of French soil is confined to a very limited area. But within that area are some highly important industrial centers. Two provinces, Pas de Calais and Nord, for instance, produce over 60 per cent of all the coal mined in France. Yet even before the loss of that region, France depended upon imports to meet about 40 per cent of her requirements. With Dutch and Belgian coal cut off, with access to British coal rendered more difficult and with less than 40 per cent of the domestic output accessible, the German advance has indeed dealt the country a serious industrial blow.

In the region about Lille, Roubaix, Turcoing and Armentieres, moreover, about one-third of the cotton spindles and the bulk of the woolen industry are located.

Of course, the losses to France from the invasion do not mean that Germany will gain correspondingly. For industrial operations are difficult to carry on in regions under alien control with customary communications destroyed. Furthermore, the blockade will be extended to cut off access to cotton, wool and other essential raw materials in this area.

France as well as Great Britain has also suffered severely from the invasion of the Low Countries. The Allies have lost access to the coal, machinery and dairy products formerly exported to them from the Netherlands as well as the coal, iron and steel and other metal products of Belgium. But to what extent these Allied losses represent gains to Germany is problematical. No doubt, large stores of important raw materials have fallen into German hands. Given a short war, they will be a boon. But in the long run, assuming the blockade is not broken, the Netherlands and Belgium are likely to become an economic liability to the Reich.

With access to their colonial possessions denied these conquered countries the Department of Commerce estimates that they will be deprived of from half to two-thirds their bread grains, all the cotton, wool, jute, ferrous and nonferrous metals except zinc, quantities of feedstuffs and various essential chemicals they were previously able to import.

Any adequate appraisal of the changed economic position of Germany vis-a-vis the Allies as the result of conquests since the outbreak of the war would be a task beyond the powers of even the most industrious statistical analyst. At the moment it suffices to point out that the Germans have acquired certain economic advantages that will, if held, greatly handicap French industry's efforts to meet the extraordinary demands of war times.

Watch On The Borders

In sharp contrast with the procedure which has long obtained in the rest of the world, citizens of any nation in North America have been able to travel freely over the continent without passports and visas.

But the growing seriousness of the international situation and the possibility that such freedom of movement might result in an influx of fifth column elements has forced a change in this regard. After July 1, the Department of State has announced, visas and passports will be required of citizens of Canada, Mexico, Newfoundland, Cuba, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, and Panama and the British, French and Dutch possessions in North America who desire to visit the United States.

This action complements the executive order recently issued by President Roosevelt barring the entry of aliens into this country whenever their admissions would be contrary to the public safety.

The new rule will very likely work hardships in individual cases although the Department of State appears anxious to reduce these to the minimum. It is understood, for instance, that the regulations will be modified in regard to some 20,000 Canadians who daily commute across the border to work in Detroit, Buffalo and other American cities on this side of the international line. In any event, the present necessity of the restrictions to be imposed on the entry of travelers and tourists to the United States cannot be denied. Closer supervision over all aliens entering this country is imperative under existing circumstances.

The House Approves

Not only employer groups but both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. are on record as favoring amendment of the Wagner Labor Relations Act. But factional jealousies in labor's ranks and suspicion of employers' motives in urging specific changes have made it extremely difficult to formulate a revisionist plan that would attract support from both sides.

However, the decisive vote by which the House yesterday passed the Smith bill to amend the Wagner Act shows that interest in plans for strengthening the machinery of collective bargaining has not abated. In fact, it appears likely that the present emergency has stimulated a desire to amend the law with a view to insuring a greater measure of industrial peace along the home front.

The favorable House action on the Smith bill was no doubt due in good part to the qualified indorsement unexpectedly given the measure by President Green of the A. F. of L. The bill now goes to the Senate modified in accordance with Mr. Green's suggestions. With an important spokesman for organized labor thus won over, Smith bill advocates can no longer be seriously charged with attempting to sabotage the Wagner Act.

By far the most important of the amendments approved by the House is that which provides for a separation of the prosecuting and judicial functions exercised by the National Labor Relations Board. There is justifiable ground for objecting to the present system under which the board and its employes act as "judge, jury, prosecutor and executioner." The Smith bill would abolish the present board and create a new one serving only in a quasi-judicial capacity. The administrative functions would be vested in an administrator charged with presenting, investigating and prosecuting cases before the board.

This proposal alone would, if accepted, remove one of the major obstacles to efficient enforcement of the Wagner Act, and help restore confidence in the impartiality of NLRB decisions. Partly because incompatible functions have been vested in the Labor Board as well as because of the complications caused by factional labor disputes in representation cases, public confidence in the board has been severely impaired. Whether this attitude is justified or not is beside the point. It is a factor which seriously handicaps effective enforcement of the Wagner Act, and provides another reason in favor of abolishing the present board and making an entirely new start.

Even if other amendments carried by the Smith bill should fail of enactment, it is to be hoped the Senate will realize the importance of strengthening the Wagner Act where it is most seriously defective by approving the separation of powers.

The Awakening

Last Tuesday in New York Lord Lothian suggested to a group of Columbia University alumni that Hitler and his armies may be the scourge that God has found necessary to rouse the western democratic world from its long stupor of materialism and selfishness. Two days later, while the banks of the Somme and the Aisne trembled with the most fearful and fateful battle of history, Premier Paul Reynaud told his countrymen that "our first duty is to acknowledge our faults" and among the gravest faults of modern democratic governments he mentioned the loss of both wisdom and courage.

Here are words that strike a very different chord from the smug and hollow platitudes that for so many years have been the stock in trade of chanceries, parliaments and the press. There has been glib talk of "ideals" of "moral values" of "civilization" and the dignity of man. But it was not in such concepts that the democratic politicians rested their confidence. They rested it first in what they believed a shrewder bargaining power, and when that failed, they rested it with equal complacence in what they believed to be their nations' superior material resources and wealth.

Within the comfortable circles of their supposedly impregnable strength they spoke of the material devices whereby "the forces of evil" and "the powers of darkness" were to be worn down and crushed. They forgot that evil is not a material force to be overcome by material might but a spiritual dynamism against which the stoutest steel and concrete are of themselves in the long run, impotent.

But now there are signs of an awakening from the stupor of the past. The people of France, for instance, seem to be forging new weapons out of their very suffering and dangers. Miss Dorothy Thompson, in a recent article spoke of a new spirit of consecration, a new "humility and will to virtue" she found growing among them in the terrible last days of May. Here are weapons of the soul that may offset, and more than offset, all that has been lost in tanks, and men and guns. For they are weapons that grow stronger with use.

Whether the tempests of flame along the Aisne and the Somme represent the labor pangs of a new and an ultimately better world, or a further test of "new spirit" in France, none of us knows. But this is plain: The lesson that France has learned at the price of so much blood, misery and sacrifice, is one that, sooner or later, we must learn ourselves.

A Tragic Shortage

In his testimony before the House Military Committee on Tuesday, Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, declared that lack of men "is our most tragic shortage at the moment."

Gen. Marshall's statement was made in support of the proposal that in case of need the President be empowered to call out the National Guard to supplement the regular Army. But it raises a question which considerably transcends that immediate issue. To secure the defense of this Nation and this hemisphere it is obviously not enough for the United States to increase the number of planes, ships, tanks, anti-aircraft guns and other instruments of war available to our Army and our Navy. There must also be the men to man them.

Hitherto, except during the World War period, the custom has been to recruit the personnel of the Army and Navy through voluntary enlistment. But is that method any longer adequate to our present and future needs or even desirable as a continuing national policy? The question is being raised with increasing insistence whether it would not be the counsel of wisdom for the United States to establish before long a system of compulsory military training.

As long as our Army was small there was no need for such a system. With the Army, Navy and Air Corps facing the likelihood of considerable expansion the question of compulsory military training is no longer academic. This fact is recognized by public opinion as reflected in the Gallup poll. In December, 1938, the question whether the United States should require every able-bodied young man 20 years old to serve in the Army, Navy or the air forces for one year received an affirmative reply from only 38 per cent of those questioned. The percentage has since risen to 50.

Our growing national defense needs require an increasing national effort. Directly or indirectly it will affect the lives and fortunes of every inhabitant of the United States. Sacrifices will be demanded of all. It is not too soon, therefore, to begin considering whether, under the circumstances, the voluntary system of recruitment for the defense establishments has not become inefficient and inadequate.

Feline Protocol

A delicate problem of protocol has arisen in Downing street. The question is whether Mr. Churchill's cat shall take precedence over the official black cat of No. 10, the prime minister's residence.

The cat of No. 10 has been on the government pay roll for years, but has become identified with former Prime Minister Chamberlain, and, therefore, has been christened "Munich." According to information the new prime minister will bring his own black feline, "Nelson," from the Admiralty.

Cats have created government problems before. The cats in the Forum of Trajan, if memory serves, stood in the way of the modernization of Rome by Il Duce. Squatter's rights had been accorded these animals for years, and there was public agitation when the excavators appeared. The semisacred status of the creatures, however, was not allowed to halt the march of progress and they were removed in true Fascist fashion.

The whole issue in Downing street could be avoided, and dictatorial measures forestalled, if "Munich" would move with Mr. Chamberlain to the latter's new official home. But cats are sturdy defenders of territorial rights, and the chances are that "Munich" and "Nelson" will have to settle the feud in their own way—after the manner of nations.

The Lieder Boom

From Variety

While phonograph record business has been enjoying a boom here (in Milwaukee), as elsewhere, an unusual local angle is an unprecedented demand for German disks, not only from this city's large population of German descent, but from people of other ancestral nationalities. Jewish buyers of transcribed German music are sufficiently numerous to occasion comment among the dealers, and one sales manager (Gentile) said:

"The Jews are broadminded enough not to deny themselves music they like just because it happens to be of Teutonic origin, but they insist upon records of only American manufacture."

Folk music, popular songs, yodel numbers and quartet vocals in German are all in big demand, and a few typical titles are "Brummel Petrus," "Du Kannst Nicht Treu Sein," "Eine Seefahrt Die Ist Lustig," "Wenn Ich Gross Bin, Liebe Mutter," and "Fahr Mich in Die Ferne Mein Blonder Matrose."

For Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wonder if the people who write and speak so glibly of rushing to the defense of the Allies are the ones who would be sent to die on foreign battlefields. War is a terrible and tragic thing, and while we cannot always avoid it, we should make sure, at least that its aims are just.

Certainly we Americans want to save democracy and abolish Hitlerism. But is this what England and France are fighting for? Let's never forget that France has set up concentration camps of her own in which some of her greatest anti-Fascists languish while open sympathizers of the Nazi regime (like M. Bonnet) remain in high places. And while she has only recently torn away civil liberties from the French people, remember that for many years she has kept the peoples of her great colonial empire in conditions of bondage and oppression very similar to those existing inside Nazi Germany.

We cannot but view with alarm the complete dictatorship set up in England.

Let's not repeat the mistake of 1917. We don't have to send our boys across the ocean to defend democracy. We can preserve democracy and civilization only if we are sane enough to stay out of the filthy mess across the seas.

MRS. L. LYNER.
Washington, May 25.

The Ramspeck Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On behalf of the National Federation of Federal Employees and the National Legislative Council of Federal Employee Organizations I wish to express thanks and appreciation for your consistent and vigorous editorial support of H. R. 960, Representative Ramspeck's bill to extend the merit system and classification and to provide other needed improvements and modernizations in the Federal system of personnel administration.

As your editorials on this subject have pointed out so effectively, this legislation is vitally needed, and never so much as now when everything possible should be done to enhance the efficiency and effectiveness of the Federal administrative establishment.

LUTHER C. STEWARD,
President, National Federation of Federal Employes.

Reassurance

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is time to reassure the American people about the present European conflict, which perhaps should be called a conquest rather than a war.

Future ages, which will take a detached, unimpassioned view of this conflict, will probably rank Hitler with those great scourges of the human race called conquerors, among whom are numbered Genghis Khan, Alexander, Caesar, and Napoleon.

We need have no alarm at present events in Europe. Hitler, like all other conquerors of the past, is only a man, and like those other conquerors, he will go just so far, and no farther. The Almighty Power who controls him as it controls all other men, has assigned the course he shall follow. Hitler cannot deviate from that course. But sooner or later, he will die, or he will fall in the onrush of his victories. The kingdoms set up by conquerors crumble and are reassembled according to the working of the natural laws governing the existence and growth of nations.

When Hitler fails—as fail he will in one way or another—Germany, like the prodigal son, will return to the family of sane and sober nations, and then the world need no longer fear Germany.

CHARLES HOOPER,

Rearmament

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Daily Worker of June 5 hails a resolution adopted by the Progressive Librarians Council.

The resolution urges us to remain at peace, not "to produce materials which can only mean further destruction," i. e., not to rearm, and to "protect our cultural achievements" by "ending loans and credits to warring nations."

I suggest that copies of this resolution be sent to Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Finland, Poland, Norway, Holland and Belgium, the original to be presented to the Louvain Library.

An Ironical Proposal

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many of our most distinguished columnists are coming to the conclusion that we are facing a military situation, and that military principles should be applied.

A well recognized military principle is that when the crisis of a battle has arrived a commander should use his reserve. Reserves which are not used can have no influence on the outcome. A corollary of this principle is that the reserve when used, should be used vigorously, to strike a powerful concentrated blow, and not be fed in by "driblets" here and there.

There has been quite a number of proposals that we sell to the Allies, at the best prices that we can get, a lot of our obsolete material, that we are quite certain we shall not need again. Mr. Lindley is of the opinion that we might let them have as many as 500 of our obsolete planes, and some of our obsolete destroyers, which are now laid up, waiting to become junk. Certainly there appears to be opportunity for a "rummage sale" which we should take advantage of.

Miss Thompson, who has more fighting spirit than the majority of men, would go even further. She realizes that we are facing the worst crisis in the world's history, and as a practical measure she would send to Europe 300 new planes. This, she says, "is not nothing," if each could bring down 27 Nazi planes, as she hopefully suggests. We have in our Army and Navy some 8,000 planes, maybe more, so that would be throwing in a stout 4 per cent. The highest figures I have seen do not indicate that the Germans possess a preponderance of more than a mere 15,000 to 18,000 planes in excess of those of the Allies.

I have a further suggestion to add to the above. There are in this country many pawnshops, and in most of those I have entered there are old firearms, mostly pistols, some of which have been on hand for years. What a boon it would be to our hard-pressed pawnbrokers if they could get rid of these old pledges—at a fair price, of course. Why not gather them up and sell them to the Allies? It is not likely that very much ammunition could be supplied because of the great number of models. But if they are not loaded, these pistols could be flung right into the teeth of the Germans as they come charging into the Allied positions. P. S. BOND.
Washington, June 5.

North Dakotan Speaks

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest the article by B. C. Clark, dated May 21, re Senator Gerald P. Nye's bill asking for a postage stamp commemorating "nine years of continuous debt defaulting" by "certain" European nations.

I believe Mr. Clark sums up the situation admirably, but I notice a letter by Gerald W. Movius, secretary to Senator Nye, dated May 28, entitled "Defense of North Dakota."

I do not believe that is a proper title for that article. It may attempt to defend Senator Nye's action in proposing this Stamp Act, but certainly it does not apply to North Dakota. North Dakota generally is no more in sympathy with that kind of propaganda than with his action in retarding amendment to the law permitting the sale of planes, motors and other articles to the Allies, necessary to their defense.

He, with others, succeeded in delaying the repeal of that provision of the so-called "Neutrality Act" for months, and in fact for years. Had such delay not been occasioned, a different prospect might today exist upon the battlefront.

North Dakota is strongly back of the Administration's foreign policy, including that of adequate preparedness for defense of this Nation against any aggressor.

HALVOR L. HALVORSON.
Minot, N. Dak., June 1.

An American Responds

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with regret the letter signed "Briton," which appeared in The Post of June 5. Public opinion has been steadily mounting in favor of the Allies and there is an almost unanimous demand that the United States supply them with planes, and munitions and money, and in some quarters even with manpower. In view of the desirability if not necessity of obtaining this support "Briton's" letter seems most ill-advised.

After a detailed resume of the manner in which the Americans have taken advantage of the Allies' need by sharp practices, he refers to Mr. Lindley's hope that the Allied fleets would never be surrendered. "Briton" asks "what American assistance has been, or is likely to be forthcoming, which would require as a quid pro quo the sacrifice of Allied civilians to prevent the Allied fleet being used by Germany against America?"

At this crucial moment when the safety of the British Empire if not civilization itself depends largely upon the support of the United States it seems undiplomatic, to say the least, for the Britisher to end his paragraph by asking "Why should those millions be sacrificed on the altar of American security?"

Perhaps he has forgotten that the Allies both asked and obtained the sacrifice of millions of American lives and billions of American dollars on their altars in the last war to preserve the security of the Allies. Perhaps Briton does not realize that Americans are prepared to sacrifice again for principle and for the perpetuation of that civilization for which his own countrymen and the countrymen of his gallant ally in France have given their lives on the fields of Flanders this very month.

This is not the moment for recriminations or the harboring of personal animosities. It was this spirit that dictated the terms of the Versailles Treaty thereby creating Hitler and a reign of vengeance and destruction that threatens to destroy not only the creators of the Versailles Treaty but civilization itself. Had Jesus Christ or Abraham Lincoln been members of the peace conference in Paris everything that life and liberty hold dear would not be threatened with a permanent blackout.

The Post Impressionist

A Man Never Knows

Uncle Jeff made the best ax handles and blackberry brandy on Turkey Gobbler Knob. The more berries Lov picked, the more he got to thinking about Uncle Jeff; and the hotter it became—the stronger was the odor of berries. Lov was about fed up with sticking his hands into briars and having wasps and yellowjackets worry his face, so he up and set out for a snort of likker.

Lov went the longest way 'round by Poplar Hollow, because he figured it would be cooler, but it was so hot before he crossed a gulley-washed sheep pasture he was soaking wet and heat monkeys jumped all over the ground in front of him.

Lov could see that Uncle Jeff was away. His old woman always sat on the porch as a sort of indifferent lookout whenever the old man was puttering around in the brush within a hollering distance. Lov yelled and the old woman hooted back from down by the spring.

"Take a cheer," she says.

Lov sat on the floor boards with his back against a post and waited for her.

Uncle Jeff's Molly set the bucket down and Lov dipped a cool drink. There ain't nothing like spring water when a body is thirsty and full of sweat.

"Whar's Uncle Jeff?"

"The sheriff come and fetched him to town."

Lov figured maybe the boys over the ridge had got plumb jealous of his trade. A body couldn't hardly make a living in the hills no more without a heap of trouble.

"Hit warn't thet," she says. "He got tooken because he brung home some railroad belongings."

"He warn't no stealing man. Uncle Jeff warn't on a toot and done hit unbeknowing?"

"Wal, he war and he warn't. You recollect whar they's a-building thet spur alongst Dead Man's Cove? Wal, the old man had some dealings with some of them what was a-working on the spur and they give him a invite to come and see how they was a gitten along. So he up and went a couple of times and come back a-telling me they was the damn'dest fool idjits he ever seen. He said they was a-building a fence high agin as he was and they had the poles set 'most a mile apart. I told him I was of a mind to take a piece of kindling and slop his brains out—him telling a tale like that."

"I low they ain't no stock in the Cove. What they be a-fencing fer?"

"Tell the old man thet," she says, "And him smart as all getout. Two heads air better than one, I tells him, even iffen one air a sheep's head. But they ain't no stopping him once he has got his mind set to something. So I let him mouth, him crazy as a b'iled owl. He says one day he is a-going down to the Cove whar he seen a turn of wire, says he kin use a turn of wire a sight better'n them crazy folks what air a-building the spur. They got the gol-durndest fence-line, he says. Hit's a mile high and half a mile wide. A giraffe could git under hit without stooping and you kin set a row of pole beans a-tween the posts. Hit's one fetch'ed muss-up. They ain't laid but one strand of wire fer a week and I aim to have thet. If a body was a-going to finish a job they would of done hit a-fore this.

"I never answered him back seeing he had done set his mind on hit. A-fore night he comes back a-toting the biggest turn of wire you ever seen. I done right smart clumming, he says, but I got a right smart turn of hit and liked to worked my hide off a-getten thet wire offen them poles. Hit's a good thing they let thet fence go and not finished hit, iffen they had hit would of lasted 'tell Jedgement Day, lessen the poles rotted. You're only smart whar the skin's off, I think, but I don't say my mind, him being so proud of hisself."

"Air they got him in the caboose?" Lov asks—curious-like.

"Jes fer overnight. The sheriff says he is only taking sech a crazy varmint as the old man to show the folks. The sheriff says he never heard tell of a body stealing the telegraph a-fore. My old man says, do you mean one of them things you wind up and talk to somebody on 'tother end? Hell, yes, says the sheriff, what in hell did you think hit was, with all them poles and one wire high as a turkey roost? Why, plague-take-hit, says my old man, I seen hit a-setting thar a whole week and I figgered hit was the foundation fer a might high fence."

JOHN C. ROGERS.

Our Interests

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The American people do not yet realize the kind of world which will come into existence as the result of the defeat of the Allies by the Germans.

It will mean that all Europe will be Germanic. It will mean that Africa, Australia, New Zealand, India and probably all of South America will be Germanic. That South America would be German-dominated is a foregone conclusion. Nazi agents are swarming in South America and are well organized. The United States and Canada would be isolated and alone in a world of German or German-dominated states. If Germany wins there can be no doubt that she will turn her forces to the destruction of the United States.

It cannot be known whether Germany would succeed in such an effort, but whether she does or not it would be necessary for the United States to become an armed camp to maintain her existence.

There can be no doubt that so far as the people of the United States are concerned, we will be a happier and better people in the world as it is now constituted than we would be in a German world. There are matters which need correction in the world as it now is. They will be remedied in due time but those matters are trivial compared to the slavery to be endured in a German world.

If the above hypotheses are correct, it would seem to be for the best interests of the United States to take steps to defeat Germany on the theory that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

RICHARD STURTEVANT.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Weakest Link In The American Defense

BY ARMS ALONE, absolutely indispensable though they are, neither this nation nor any other can make itself secure. A nation, however highly armed, must have a sound foreign policy or it will find itself at last in mortal peril. The principles of a sound foreign policy are self-evident: they are, first, that a nation must cultivate the support and the friendship of those other nations whose fundamental interests are similar to its own; second, that among its potential antagonists it must seek to conciliate and find the ground of compromise with those nations which do not directly and immediately threaten its own vital security and independence; third, that when a nation must defend itself, it will arrange to defend itself not on its own doorstep but at a distance where its opponent is least able to strike back effectively.

The nightmare of all statesmen who ever understood the realities of national defense has been that their country might find itself isolated without allies amidst a coalition of their country's opponents. To let a situation of this sort develop is to mismanage foreign affairs to the point of disaster. The foreign relations of the United States have been mismanaged to the point of disaster. We face the imminent prospect of finding ourselves isolated in the face of an armed and inimical coalition in both oceans. If this perilous situation is to be redressed, the responsibility must be fixed and the causes remedied.

THE AWAKENED people of the United States need to fix their attention upon the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate. Let us not confuse ourselves by naming names; let us grant without reservations that all the members of the committee have been and are without exception sincerely patriotic. Let us impugn no man's sincerity or doubt the honesty of his intentions. Let us look only at the record of this committee during the past 12 months, remembering that this committee has had the last word in the conduct of American foreign policy, and that its acts,—much more than the proposals and purposes of the President, the Department of State, the Navy and the Army,—have determined the position of this country in the world today.

IN JULY a year ago the situation, known to all informed observers was as follows: a great war in Europe was unavoidable as long as Hitler was convinced that he had the power to win it. Hitler was allied with Italy and had a loose pact with Japan. In the Far East Japan was not only at war with China but was attacking Great Britain and attempting to humiliate her and drive her out of the Far East.

Confronted with this situation, what was the foreign policy of the committee last July? The committee did two things. It incited, approved, and supported the policy of challenging Japan by abrogating the commercial treaty and threatening to impose an embargo. Second, the committee refused to relax the so-called neutrality law which would, in case of war prevent the Allies from buying planes and other materials of war. Thus the net result of the committee's control of foreign relations was to challenge Japan in one ocean while refusing help to our natural and historic allies in the other ocean. This was called a policy of peace. But it is not a policy of peace to challenge the greatest naval power in the Pacific. It was called a policy of isolation. In fact it was a policy of making certain that if we ever have to go to war, we shall be isolated.

THE WAR, which controlling elements in the committee poohpoohed, broke out in September. Because it did not begin with a furious battle on the western front, many of these gentlemen who are entrusted with the destiny of America, decided that it was a phony war. They, therefore, insisted upon enacting a law, called a neutrality law, which relaxed the prohibition on the sale of arms on condition only that the country would put itself in a strait-jacket, would renounce its historic rights upon the high seas, and would scuttle and run from any and every effort to uphold international law. Because the lifting of the embargo on planes was known to be a matter of life and death, those who understood the situation paid the price demanded and they have loyally adhered to the bargain.

In May the phony war became the dreaded total war, and as the Nazis cut their way to the Channel ports, the country as a whole, and even the committee, realized that if the Allies fall, the security of this hemisphere is gravely imperiled. In this crisis the committee has again made two contributions to the situation. And exactly as in July a year ago, it has again challenged one country while refusing to lend assistance to the nations which are resisting the country that the committee has challenged. Toward our potential opponents it is again provocative and toward our allies it is still "neutral." In the past week the committee has voted to defy Germany if, the victor in Europe, she claims as the spoils of war the American colonies of the Netherlands, France, and Britain. It has also voted down the furnishing of help to the Allies who are fighting to prevent Germany from obtaining the victory which, in its consequences in this hemisphere, the committee has decided not to recognize.

NOT CONTENT with having challenged the potential victors in Europe, this committee has by implication given a blanket guaranty to all the republics in this hemisphere. Having given the guaranty, by reaffirming the Monroe Doctrine at the very moment when it is more seriously challenged than at any time since before our agreement with Great Britain in 1823, the committee in its report has announced that in undertaking this task the United States would, of course, like "to consult" with its neighbors, but that "there are no obligations upon any of the American republics, which of course includes the United States, to be bound by any action taken at any consultation."

The committee certainly has a good appetite for taking all possible chances that the United States shall be thoroughly isolated in a critical emergency. Its view is that we must not know definitely in advance what the American republics will do in order to defend this hemisphere, and that they must not know definitely in advance what we shall do. If anyone can think of a more foolhardy method of making the Monroe Doctrine mean that we are involved all over this hemisphere without certainty that we shall get support, what is it? One would suppose that the most elementary common sense would have persuaded the committee that binding obligations in the form of treaties of mutual military assistance were imperative and indispensable.

THIS IS THE RECORD of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations during the most critical period of modern history. On this record the committee, as now constituted, is incompetent. To leave in such incompetent hands the decisive power which this committee exercises is a danger to the security and the independence of the American people.

Default On Duty

NO MORE DISMAL words were ever spoken to the rank and file of the Americal Federation of Labor than William Green's remarks at the Louisville reunion of the union of the stagehands and movie employes. In that speech Green curled up and quit before the challenge of a few contemptible criminals in this and other unions. The national president of a labor movement, which is numerically the largest and should be the most effective in the world, gave notice to the rank and file that the central body defaults its duty to protect them from the most defiant exploitation by crooks arising in their own ranks and by the most vicious rodents of the underworld of mobs, prostitution and rackets.

He admitted before the whole Nation that the organization which honored him with a position of high dignity and great trust no longer has the will or the moral force to guard its members or its own reputation.

Time was when the federation was a strong, respectable power in American life, but that time has gone. By Green's admission the great federation which endured through physical strife and poverty is unable to guarantee its members even common honesty in their unions. Worse than that, the A. F. of L. takes the side of the crook against the rank-and-file victim if the crook can show leadership credentials. Green had expressed this attitude before, but this time he formally degraded his office and the A. F. of L. itself by reiterating his shocking abdication of moral leadership in the presence of a union which is notorious for the depravity and brutal crookedness of its controlling personalities.

I WILL ADMIT now that when I exposed the unbelievably foul condition of this racket I was so amazed by my discoveries that at first I did not trust my own facts. Careful as I had been, I re-checked and cross-checked lest publication do injustice to the reputation of the union or some of the criminals themselves. Not to be sanctimonious, I was thinking of libel, too.

I will admit, also, that I expected Green to snarl back, as a good union man would, but thought he would busy himself at once with the few decent men of force remaining in the leadership to fumigate the temple of labor. It didn't occur to me that the president of the A. F. of L. would take the side of the crook against the rank and file by attacking the revelations themselves as anti-labor propaganda. But then it began to develop that Green himself must have known all along the character of the criminals in question. It developed that he had subscribed the prestige of the office entrusted to him by the workers to a petition for a presidential pardon for George Scalise, a smelly criminal and lifelong associate of gangsters who had muscled into control of a big union at the head of a jail-bird mob and was robbing thousands of weary, ill-paid rank-and-filers, women as well as men. If a rank outsider could discover the facts by ordinary leg work Mr. Green either did know them or, not knowing them, was just too dumb for his job.

THE STAGE HANDS and movie employes' racket is one of the very bad unions in the A. F. of L., but not necessarily the worst. The Building Service Union of Scalise is just as bad, notwithstanding a recent fake reform—and it will be noted that Thomas E. Dewey, not Green, frightened the crooks into that pretense. The Bartenders' Union may be sanitary in spots, but, like a spoiled oyster, the reek of its badness outscores any decency that may be in it. The poor, ignorant, strong-back slaves of the common laborers' union are robbed by remorseless gorillas in disgraceful betrayal of the mission of the A. F. of L.

And so it goes, with poor men and women contributing sums out of their necessity, a total running into millions a year, to treasuries handled by grafters, job-sellers and extortioners, and with Green arising before a racket union to indorse the ruling mob. These are not the only crooked unions in the A. F. of L. Only a Government inquiry could approximate the size of the graft taken from the earnings of the workers or reveal the Rogues' Gallery among the union officials.

Unfortunately for the A. F. of L. and labor, I do not exaggerate the facts. On the contrary I speak only of my own knowledge, and I don't know the half of it.

Next year, barring war, the National Government will have to take action. This kind of thing can't go on, and the means of reform apparently do not exist from within.

'We Sail For England'

Signs In Flanders Point To Britain

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Cologne, Germany, June 7.—While the mass of the German striking force is being thrown southward to hammer the French into capitulation, to the northward preparatory measures are being taken by air, land and sea units of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's fighting machine for the invasion of Great Britain. The recurrent bombings of airports and other military objectives on British soil provide a sign of what is to come if the offensive against France succeeds.

Along a key stretch of French and Belgian coastline from Boulogne in the south to Zeebrugge in the north, I have seen this week the sturdy German sentinels who stand facing toward the shores of England as symbols of the brilliant success of the great drive to the sea. This drive has not only opened the way for an attempted subjugation of Britain, but also has made it impossible for Britain to render more than feeble support to France in this hour of her trial.

There is still talk in Paris and London of unity in spirit. But the vast wedge which the Germans have driven to the coast has rent asunder the effective unity in arms of the Anglo-French Allies.

THE BATTLEFIELDS of Belgium and northwestern France afford many signs that a British army participated in the fighting—massed tanks, trucks and field guns of British make, half-destroyed military stores, here a stray helmet of characteristic design, there a litter of British uniforms, by the wayside the unburied corpse of a youngster from across the Channel not yet reached by the burial squad, freshly made graves marked as those of Britons, and then in columns along the road or in provisional camps the forlorn British prisoners.

These come close to being the only vestiges on the continent of a proud expeditionary army, with the possible exception of the existence of a few detachments south of the German lines in France. We were told at Dunkerque that the last of the shattered British troops to get away by sea embarked at that port two days before it capitulated.

As the last British ship steamed out of the wreckage of the harbor, the French land forces were left virtually alone to face the fury of the German onslaught. True, the Allies can still collaborate in the air. Yet, in general, it may be said that the successful drive to the sea has opened the way for Der Fuehrer to attempt to smash Britain and France in turn.

As the whole plan was prepared at the outset, it apparently had three phases:

1. Drive to the sea—completed.
2. Smashing of the French army in operation.
3. Invasion of Britain—in preparation.

In many points along the coast from Boulogne to Zeebrugge, we saw French and Belgian coastal guns being manned by German artillerymen. Large numbers of German antiaircraft guns were in position at strategic points about the ports.

In the course of our tour we visited five key ports which are calculated to play a major role in the prospective attempt of Der Fuehrer to imitate William the Conqueror. They were Boulogne, Calais, Dunkerque, Ostend and Zeebrugge.

THE HEART OF DUNKERQUE is little more than a huge mass of wreckage—the work of German bombs—but there, as well as at the other ports, relatively little damage has been done to the permanent masonry of the docks. Clearly the Germans, in line with their naval plans, were sparing in the use of explosive bombs against the harbor facilities.

Within or near all the harbors we visited the wrecks of Allied ships are visible. Yet in no case is the entrance to a harbor entirely blocked by the hulks. Energetic efforts would place the ports—even perhaps Dunkerque—in condition for use as naval bases in relatively short order.

Of the three great French ports, Boulogne was the least seriously damaged. Here and there whole buildings have been leveled by bombs, it is true, and others damaged. There were shell holes in many roofs and facades.

Field guns and other abandoned equipment strewn about in the streets told of the last stand which detachments of the expeditionary force had made there to cover the embarkation. Large numbers of sad-faced French civilians waited in queues at various points for bread rations. On the docks German soldiers stationed within the sandbag emplacements of antiaircraft guns were keeping a close look-out for British planes.

Our motor caravan sped along through the sand dunes between Boulogne and Calais. Apparently untouched by bomb or shell, the lighthouse at Cap Gris Nez came into view. Cap Gris Nez is the point at which the continental coast line reaches out closest to the shores of England. In happier times, 14 years ago this summer Gertrude Ederle started her Channel swim from the beach near the lighthouse.

A SIGN BEFORE the Hotel Des Bains, situated at one point along the highway, read: "American bar and afternoon tea." But there was no sign of life about the hotel. On the radio installed in the car we picked up a Paris station. It was Sunday. The notes of a Mass sung in some church in the French capital came on the air.

The signs of recent battle became distinctly visible a short distance outside Calais. There were wrecked Allied trucks by the side of the road, and in a nearby field a battery of abandoned antiaircraft artillery.

The destruction in Calais was appreciably greater than that in Boulogne. Building upon building had been wrecked by explosive bombs or swept by fire. Wreckage from the buildings, as well as abandoned Allied military equipment, cluttered the streets. massed trucks and cars had been dumped onto the sidewalks.

A cafe near the waterfront was open, apparently to cater to the troops. At the characteristic zinc bar I drank with a bronzed young German soldier. Stars and crossbones were embroidered on the lapels of his battle-gray jacket. He was a member of the "Death's Head" Regiment of the Nazi S. S. (Elite Guard). When I expressed surprise that his detachment should be in Calais, he said:

"We always go forward first. We are here ready to go to England."

Once again in German hands, Zeebrugge may now play a role even more conspicuous than that in the last war. Here the Germans had their great submarine base. Today two Allied transports, victims of German bombs, lie capsized close by the docks. Once again Germans—this time with antiaircraft artillery—stand guard along the breakwater which featured in the dashing British naval attack on St. George's Day, 1918.

We swung out down the coast through empty seaside resorts to Ostend. A vestige of more peaceful times which seemed almost a portent, a sign above the docks in this Belgian port read: "Ostend—London."

The Once Over

Modern Aesop

The eagle knew that there were buzzards hovering all around. The sky was full of them. He had noticed for a long time that they were increasing in numbers, size and boldness.

"Why don't you do something about those buzzards?" asked a neighboring eagle.

"They can't get anywhere. They're harmless," said the eagle.

"The hell they are," said the neighboring eagle as several very big ones swooped down and snapped at his nest. "They're getting bolder all the time. They're a menace."

"This is a free country," said the eagle.

"It's especially free for buzzards," said the neighboring eagle. "Look! There's at least 20 of 'em hovering right over you now."

"They have the same rights we have," said the eagle. "It says so in the book."

"What book?"

"The book of rules."

* * * *

"Hey! One of 'em just dropped a rock and busted your eggs," said the friendly eagle. "Ain't you gonna do anything?"

"It's not very nice of them to act like that, but it provides a sort of valve through which they blow off steam. If I did anything it would only draw attention to them and give them a sense of greater importance," reasoned the eagle.

A whole flock of pretty big vultures now swooped down, clawed at both eagles and tried to tear up their nests.

"You —— ——!" hissed one big buzzard.

* * * *

"Did you hear what he said?" demanded the neighboring eagle.

"Yes," said the eagle, "but it's perfectly legal."

"How is it legal?"

"Free speech," said the eagle. "All birds have free speech, you know. It's guaranteed."

"Does that go for buzzards."

"It even goes for vultures," said the eagle. "We've got to be fair, you know."

* * * *

At this point a flock of enormous vultures came roaring down, accompanied by a lot of supervultures, and attacked every eagle in sight.

"How about that?" demanded the neighboring eagle. "You're going to do something now, aren't you?"

"You get too excited," said the eagle. "Relax! Stop worrying! The way to deal with buzzards and vultures is to ignore 'em."

"Hey! This is the limit!" screamed the neighboring eagle. "What are you going to do now?"

"I shall make a radio address warning about the danger from buzzards and vultures," said the eagle.

"Will the radio carry it?"

"The radio carries everything," concluded the eagle. "After I speak the radio will carry the speech on the head buzzards and vultures."

"It doesn't make sense," said the neighboring eagle, giving himself up.

Presidential Powers

By Mark Sullivan

Should Congress Go Home?

PRESIDENT Roosevelt's press conference dealt with what was foremost in the news, the transfer of 50 airplanes by the Navy to a plane manufacturing company, as part payment on new planes later to be made for the Navy; and the expectation that the manufacturing company will at once sell the 50 old planes to the Allies. That, and the right of our Government to make direct sales of old arms and ammunition to the Allies. In explaining the latter point Mr. Roosevelt read to the newspaper men a legal opinion by the acting Attorney General. The opinion was technical, with citations of statutes—the act of July 9, 1918, as amended by the act of February 25, 1919, and as partly superseded by the act of June 1, 1926.

In reading this legal verbiage Mr. Roosevelt was in good humor. He got fun out of emphasis on the legal word "supra." A news man said that reports from over the country indicated a large number of Army planes converging toward the East, and the news man asked if there was any intention of disposing of Army planes in the same way as the Navy planes. Smilingly Mr. Roosevelt said he knew nothing about the Army planes. To another question, whether Navy planes thus indirectly routed to the Allies must be old planes only, Mr. Roosevelt remarked that planes get out of date awful fast.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Mr. Roosevelt did not at all have the air of defending what is being done, but merely explaining it. One could attribute to him complete belief in the rightness of it as a policy, the support of it by public opinion and the legality of it under laws already on the books. He seems consciously careful about legal authority. He mentioned one detail of what is being done, as to which there may be need of authority from Congress, and he said this is being provided by an amendment to an appropriation bill now pending in Congress.

ON THIS, AND on other matters in the past, Mr. Roosevelt practically always seems meticulous about having authority from Congress for what he does. The charges often made against him, about aggrandizement of executive power, have never, or rarely, rested on the ground that he is disposed to exceed his legal authority. Those charges have taken the form, not of exceeding his authority, but rather of trying to get excessive grants of authority from Congress.

In this form the charge that Mr. Roosevelt likes power is justified. He has tried to get from Congress, and in the past has gotten greater power than other peacetime Presidents. And he has tried directly and personally, to get the voters to retire to private life Congressmen who were unwilling to give him as much power as he sought. The very fact that the charge in the latter form is true is itself proof that Mr. Roosevelt is disposed to keep himself within the limits of power that Congress has actually conferred upon him.

Nevertheless, Mr. Roosevelt is at this moment doing a strange thing. He makes it plain that he wants Congress to go home soon. To suggestions that Congress should merely adjourn for the national conventions, and return between and after the conventions, Mr. Roosevelt shows obvious dissent. His attitude is that Congress ought to go home after caring for a few pending measures. To make their going more justifiable, he has said that if need arises he will call them back.

Yet Mr. Roosevelt must know that any day, almost any hour, conditions will arise that will call upon him for action of the highest importance, and action which in many cases he cannot take without new power from Congress. Mr. Roosevelt and the United States are obliged to adjust themselves from day to day to emergencies created by dictators—Hitler, whose summoning of his Reichstag is confined mainly to occasions when he wishes it to serve as background and stooges for a speech to the world; and Mussolini, whose parliamentary body some time ago obligingly voted itself out of existence.

THAT, UNDER these circumstances, Congress should be away from June until January is almost unthinkable. There are contingencies already in sight which may call for Congressional action. Parts of our neutrality law may need to be repealed or amended. We may need to permit American merchant ships to go to ports of England and France, and under the existing neutrality law this would be a crime. American citizens may wish—and it may be good public policy that they should—sell goods to the Allies on credit, and this will be a crime unless we change the law. American private citizens or corporations may wish to loan money to the Allies, and to do that would necessitate changing both our neutrality law and the Johnson Act.

It is inevitable that either (a) Mr. Roosevelt must get from Congress an enormous grant of discretionary power; or (b) Congress must remain in session to give him specific powers as need arises. Neither Congress nor the country is willing to give Mr. Roosevelt a great grant of discretionary power.

Woman's Safety Group Hears Capt. Whitehurst

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

If eastbound motorists continue to ignore the 15-mile speed limit on the temporary Massachusetts avenue bridge over Rock Creek, it will be closed until the construction is finished, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, told the Woman's Safety Committee yesterday.

He spoke at the committee's final meeting at the Sulgrave Club in a panel discussion of Washington, the Problem City." He said the bridge had been built at the cost of $40,000 to accommodate motorists during the widening of the road and was a safe structure with traffic observing the speed regulations. If violations continue, despite signs and policing, the bridge will be closed, he warned. The sign "15 miles per hour" means what it says, he declared.

A law giving someone authority to tell Government departments and bureaus in different areas when their days should begin and end, would do more to help the traffic situation in Washington than spending $50,000,000 on it, William E. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic, asserted.

The staggering of hours in Government departments helped the situation while it was observed, but it did not continue, he said. He cited, for instance, the Department of Agriculture and the Bureau of Engraving, opposite each other, both closing at 4 o'clock, sending 13,500 workers out onto the street at once. Serious congestion is inevitable, he said.

The "walk lights" have had 96 per cent obedience, he said, and there has not been an accident at Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, nor at the Union Station plaza, since their installation.

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, who also spoke, told of the traffic course he took at Northwestern University and of plans for the establishment of a bureau here in which men would be specially trained to investigate accidents to determine their cause and finding means to correct them.

Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the committee, in opening the meeting, reported on its legislative program. The House has adopted the committee's recommendations which now goes to the Senate, she said.

Washington I. Cleveland, of the D. C. Motor Club, a member of the panel, described the A. A. A. "Safe Town" project in safety education for children between the ages of 4 and 9 that will be used on playgrounds this year.

Others on the panel were Inspector Lewis Edward of the Metropolitan Police; Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers; Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, and members of the safety committee.

Miss Mabel Boardman, of the American Red Cross, was honor guest and speaker at the luncheon following the meeting. She told of the speed with which vast quantities of hospital supplies, food and clothing are now being sent to the war areas by the Red Cross and distributed through the units in the various countries overseas. Relief is reaching the people in Poland, including the Jews, she said. The American headquarters has definite check on this through its American representatives there.

Another Red Cross ship will soon leave for France with ambulances, hospital supplies, food, garments made by American women and, among other things, 125,000 yards of sheeting, 60,000 cakes of soap and stoves to heat houses in which the refugee women and children are being cared for.

Hundreds of thousands of women all over the country are now sewing and rolling bandages, she said. To war refugees, the Red Cross is a symbol of the fact that there is "still some mercy, still some kindness and still some pity in the world."

The League of Republican women yesterday afternoon held its annual garden party at Wild Acres, home of Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, near Bethesda. More than 500 members and guests were received by Mrs. Grosvenor and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, the league president.

Tables for cards were arranged in the garden, on the porches and through the downstairs rooms of the house. The gardens were blooming with roses, peonies and iris. Mrs. Grosvenor wore a flowered chiffon gown and Mrs. Gann French blue chiffon with a matching picture hat. Mrs. Grosvenor's daughters, Mrs. Cabot Coville and Miss Gloria Grosvenor, and her granddaughter, Joan Blair, assisted.

Mrs. G. Louis Waller was chairman of the party, which closes the league's season.

International Set Turns Out With Capital Leaders in Colorful Tea Held at Home Of Miss Dunn on Observatory Circle

An international flavor, with cave-dweller overtones, marked the double debut yesterday afternoon of the Misses Cynthia Dunn and Pauline Curtis.

The two girls were presented at a tea held at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn. One shudders to think what would have happened if it had rained. So many people were invited that the walls of even the large Dunn house on Observatory Circle would have bulged if everybody had been wedged inside. As it was, the guests could spread out into the garden.

There were an awful lot of them. As political adviser to the State Department, Mr. Dunn has hundreds of connections in State Department and foreign diplomatic circles; as a leading Washington hostess for many years, Mrs. John Gross, mother of Miss Curtis, could be said to have almost as many intimate friends as Elsa Maxwell.

Mrs. Gross, evidently deciding that receiving at one party a day was enough—she gave a dinner dance last night for her daughter—arrived at the Dunns' in the role of guest yesterday. Mrs. Dunn received in the hall with the two girls, both of whom wore white. Miss Dunn's dress was of embroidered organza, with a full skirt, short puffed sleeves and a square peckline. Miss Curtis had chosen French marquisette, with bands of lace insets in the full skirt, long sleeves, and tiny buttons down the front of the waist. The girls wore leis of white carnations and Miss Dunn had tucked one in her hair.

The hostess was in light blue crepe, made with a wide white belt and a little jacket. A corsage of white orchids tipped in lavender completed her costume. Mrs. Gross' frock of gray was floor length and with it she wore a matching jacket and straw hat.

Countess Takes Movies

Mr. Dunn chatted with diplomats and other friends on the lawn, while his older daughter, Countess de Baillet Latour, took movies of the same scene from a terrace overlooking the garden. Her long dress of white net with embroidered red circles was identical to the one worn by Miss Louise Stillwell, daughter of Senora de Espil, who was among the debutantes assisting.

The two little Baillet-Latour children—one only a few months old—abandoned their nursery to share in the fun. The youngest looked on from the arms of a nurse while her sister toddled around after her mother. Their father, a Belgian, is in London at the moment, and his wife has been living in New York.

Small tables, centered with vases of spring flowers, were set up in the garden. A bigger one, under an orange and green marquee, was loaded down with "thin sandwiches," and another on the lawn served as a bar. Waiters also wandered about offering glasses of champagne or fruit juice to the guests.

Senora de Espil Pours Tea

Assisting Mrs. Dunn in pouring iced tea and coffee—the latter had delectable lumps of ice cream floating around in it—were:

Senora de Espil, in a pink and blue print frock with a tiny turban of pink carnations; Mrs. Warren Barbour in figured white chiffon and red cartwheel hat; Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth—her honnet was of leghorn with blue cornflowers on the brim; Mrs. Sumner Welles, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, whose appearance at big afternoon parties is rare; Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, in cool green with matching hat; Mrs. John F. Wilkins, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mrs. Lee Warren, Mrs. Fleming Newbold, Mrs. Selden Chapin, Mrs. Amory Perkins, up from Middleburg; Mrs. George Sloane, ditto from Warrenton; Mrs. Benjamin Thoron, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, who wore white with a lavender ribbon sash; Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, in pale blue with a matching tweed coat which she donned at sundown; Mrs. Lewis Clark, Mrs. Arthur Krock in cool green linen and a straw bonnet; Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mme. Brambilla, Mrs. McKee Dunn, whose pretty daughter, Mildred, also assisted; Mrs. Walter Edge, Mrs. Hugh Wilson, Mrs. John Newbold, Miss Polly Randolph, Mrs. Richard Wilmer, Mrs. Wallace Merriam, all in rose; Mrs. Henry B. Spencer, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss in pale blue; Mrs. Phillip Coffin, Mrs. Hiram Bingham and Mrs. David Barry.

"The debutantes seem to be getting prettier every year," someone remarked. Certainly the girls who assisted looked lovely in floating long dresses in pastel shades and little wristlets of spring flowers. Barbara Beale was in pale blue, perfect with her yellow hair; Edith Huntington had chosen rose; Kitty Hill, blue, and Sita Finkenstaedt, white with brilliant yellow and green flowers.

Many There From Other Cities

The other debs who assisted included the Misses Isabel Paul, Ruth Robb, both out-of-town visitors; Zeva Fish, Muriel Maddux, Mariana Evans, Ann Huidekoper, Georgianna Flather, Eugenia Merrill, Peggy Lansdowne, Mary Jane Wyman, of Illinois; Elysabeth Barbour, Laura Blair, Margaret White, Betty van der Straten-Ponthoz, Yola Wankowicz, Evelyn Sloane and Louise Russell. The Misses Sloane, Wiman and Russell are among the many out-of-town guests here for the debutante festivities which are highlighting the week-end.

Seen milling about in the garden:

The Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel Freyre y Santander . . . Representative Wigglesworth dashing in at the last moment to join his wife . . . Mrs. Hamilton Fish receiving compliments to pass on to her pretty daughter, Zeva . . . Newswriters Joseph Alsop and Count Fumasoni-Biondi, the latter accompanied by his attractive sister, Mary. She landed last week on the Conti di Savoia and plans to remain indefinitely.

Mme. Witold Wankowicz, whose husband is Polish Commissioner to the World's Fair . . . the Polish Ambassador, County Potocki, seen little at parties this year . . . the Finnish Minister and Mme. Procope, just returned from a brief vacation.

Mr. Gross chatting with Mrs. Merriam . . . Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel . . . Mrs. Henry Flood accompanied by pretty Eleanor Flood, who wore a black and white print and a white hat.

The Portuguese Minister and Mme. de Bianchi, both carrying little Japanese fans—the Minister's represented "The Spirit of Peace," he explained, pointing to the inscription which accompanied the pretty drawing.

Mrs. Davies Watches Scene

Mrs. Joseph Davies, looking things over from the terrace balcony and wearing a figured dress and pale blue flower turban . . . Mrs. Cordell Hull, topping off her white dress with a medium brimmed blue hat . . . Mrs. A. A. Berle, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Page, Robert Coe, Mr. and Mrs. Francis De Wolfe and loads of others from State Department circles.

Mrs. Marion Warburg wore a black hat with her black and green print . . . Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land drifted about . . . Miss Elsie Ekengren was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Richard Hawkins . . . Frau Thomsen, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy, was with Frau von Strempel of the embassy. Herr Thomsen is away on a business trip.

Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom threaded their way through the throng . . . Others present included Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken, Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Miss Marian Trumbull, Mrs. Duncan Cameron, Mrs. John R. Williams, Miss Hazel Edgar, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, in pale gray with a big black hat; Miss Laura Tuckerman, Lady Lewis and—but you could go on and on!

The festivities continued through the evening with the dinner dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Gross at the latter's erstwhile home, now the 1925 F street club. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Dunn and Miss Cynthia Dunn, of course, and many out-of-towners. Washington friends were invited in afterward for dancing on the sun porch or just sitting in the garden in the light of Japanese lanterns.

Miss Curtis, who finished this year at St. Timothy's School, will be guest of honor at a party to be given on Long Island later this season. Her brother-in-law and sister, the George Bostwicks, make their home there.

Debutante Cynthia Dunn will go with her mother shortly to Manchester, Mass., where they have taken a house. She has been living in New York with a chaperone this year, studying English and dramatics.

Make Debut Together At Garden Party

Miss Cynthia Louisa Dunn (left) and Miss Pauline Curtis shared honors when they made their debut together yesterday afternoon at the garden tea given by Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn. Miss Curtis is the daughter of Mrs. John M. Gross. In Hawaiian fashion, the debutantes chose to wear leis of fragrant fresh carnations, rather than to carry bouquets

Helen Kent Becomes Bride

In a setting of palms, ferns, and tall baskets of white snapdragons, lit by candles, Miss Helen Louise Kent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kraeter Kent, was married last evening to Hilleary Frazier Brown, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Brown and the late Claude M. Brown. The ceremony took place at the Georgetown Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Kenneth Baker officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace and mousseline de soie, with the lace forming the bodice and edging the sleeves and high neckline. Her tulle veil fell from a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried white sweet peas, lilies of the valley, and an orchid.

Mrs. Helen Dallman was matron of honor and the bridesmaids were the Misses Frances Byrnes Butler and Elizabeth Lanham, cousins of the bride. Mrs. Dallman wore a gown of peach net trimmed with lace and the others were dressed in blue chiffon trimmed with small bows to match. All three carried picture hats filled with garden flowers in pink, lavender, blue and yellow.

Marvin Bowman was best man and the ushers were Moir Bowman, Claude Brown, Paul Dallman and Harvey Lynn.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

MRS. ALTEMUS ("LIZ") WHITNEY is expected to return from Hollywood to ride her show string in the forthcoming Upperville Colt and Horse Show. She will stay at Llangollen, the Virginia farm which was recently awarded her in a divorce settlement by her husband, John Hay Whitney.

The Upperville Colt and Horse Show was the first ever held in this country. The late Col. Richard Dulany started it in 1853, and thus became known as the father of horse shows in the United States. Col. Dulany had good horses and was always interested in them.

IN AN EFFORT to interest others in breeding good horses, he went North and bought two stallions, "Screvanton" and "Black Hawk." The story of how the horse show began relates that two men once had an argument as to which owned the best yearling colt. Col. Dulany was considered the best judge of horses around here and was called upon to decide between the two colts.

He selected a woodland spot on his Virginia place, the same piece of land where the Upperville Show has been held ever since. So much interest had been aroused by the discussion that a hundred people showed up.

AFTER THE winning colt had been selected, Col. Dulany offered prizes to the men who would breed the best colts from his two stallions, and they were all to gather the following June to exhibit the results. Every year since, except during the Civil War, the Upperville Colt and Horse Show has been enjoyed by thousands. For years it was the only one in America, and as the seasons roll by it has become more and more famous. You can go to a horse show almost every day from April to October somewhere in the United States, but at the Upperville Show you will find the best bred horses in the country.

COL. DULANY'S two stallions were taken all over the country to encourage better breeding. "Screventon" was taken care of by an old colored man, Garner Peters, one of the Dulany servants. When the Civil War came on, "Ole Uncle Garner" was in Pennsylvania with "Screventon" on his spring circuit. They disappeared absolutely and entirely, and no one knew what happened to them. Four years later, after the war, "Ole Uncle Garner" came walking quietly into the Dulany estate leading "Screventon." He and the horse had been hidden, nobody knows where, and had supported themselves for the four years of the war.

THE SHOW WAS resumed again soon after the war, with Col. Dulany acting as president until his death many years later. They gave handsome silver cups at those first shows, and we have one in our home which my grandfather won.

• • • •

THIS YEAR the show will be held on Friday and Saturday, June 14 and 15, and the entry list is the largest ever. The show is more informal than most, and it is fun to sit on the cool grandstand under the shade of large oak trees and see the oldsters hobnobbing and swapping horse stories. Many entertainments are being planned for this year and the neighborhood will be overflowing with visitors.

• • • •

TODAY ALL ROADS lead to Front Royal, Va., for the Remount Horse Show which begins at 10 o'clock and lasts all day. Here you will see many classes from bona-fide farmer breeders, whose principal livelihood is farming or breeding. Many luncheons will be held for visitors and Lieut Col. Pleas Rogers, the commanding officer at the Remount depot, has all in readiness for a big day of sport. The road to Front Royal is through some of the loveliest country in Virginia.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Dancer Vera Zorina Captivates Audience From Start to Finish

New York, June 7.

IT is now my firm conviction that Vera Zorina, at present starring in "Louisiana Purchase" on Broadway, is the most enchanting person and personality the American theater, has known since the century's turn, or perhaps before.

ALICE HUGHES

I'd dare Father's horror by saying that the dream girls of his salad days—the Lil Russells, the Anna Helds, the Della Foxes and so on—couldn't even carry the makeup box for Zorina, whose beauty is positively breath-catching.

But it isn't only her beauty of face and body, which is somehow incomparable because it comes from her inner glow as well as from its perfection of form. From a ballerina with the Monte Carlo troupe, with long, lithe legs instead of the knotty shanks we associate with that art, she has become an excellent, simple actress, with a remarkable comedy sense that is irresistible. Her tender, comical scenes with dear little Victor Moore in the present opus are models of charm and restraint. In fact, so bewitching has she become, both as dancer and actress, that every man and woman in her audience is completely captivated from her first entrance until the final curtain falls.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I wish that hurdy-gurdy out on Thirty-ninth street would stop playing "The Marseillaise"! Aren't things tough enough without this melodic reminder? Let the old guy stick to "Sweet Rosie O'Grady!" It's harmless.

I wrote here a spell back that Raymond Gram Swing, the famous air commentator, took his wife's name Gram, when they were wed. Now Mrs. Aimee Weinland, of Bloomington, Ind., is nice enough to tell me that William Lowe Bryan, president emeritus of Indiana University, took his wife's name, Lowe, when the twain became one. Well! Any more such cases of spousely devotion? My own man, Leonard Hall, had a name fairly well known in journalism, but as he gratefully sank into a quiet way of life he learned to be called "Mr. Hughes" by the uninformed at fashion shows and my business parties without doing more than shuddering. And that's no fun for a man, unless he has a ready sense of humor and a workable philosophy.

Speaking of Shirley Temple, I get a great belt out of hearing that the other famous adolescent, John Barrymore, has inherited her bungalow on the Fox studio lot. Well, I hope the lad has her success.

The Army chaplains had a big pow-wow here recently, discussing the spiritual needs of the troops. Old Hall laughs as he remembers that each regiment's man of the cloth was referred to as "Holy Joe" by the irreverent doughboys. His outfit's first chaplain was a gentle Presbyterian from a small Ohio town whose chief duties were to supervise the mail and bury such as were unfortunate enough to die of pneumonia.

Here is one, moderate in price and obtainable up to size 44. Of cotton lace, which looks like fine linen, dyed the same cool shade as the lace—natural, rose, blue, gray or navy

Improve Your Tennis Stroke

VACATIONING at a resort, or even at home, you're strictly out of the summer fun if you can't join in sports.

Tennis, for instance, is practically a summer "must." But you can easily play well if you have right instructions and a knowledge of the rules.

Then, taking on a game with vacation friends, you step on the court like an experienced player. No asking silly questions. You know it's wrong to step over the base line when serving or even to touch it with your foot. The right way to serve is to serve from a short distance back of the base line as our diagram shows.

And you won't be so liable to miss balls if you know the correct ready position and take it right after you make a shot.

So that a quarter turn of your body will prepare you for either a forehand or a backhand return, you face your opponent with your feet straight ahead.

Hold your racket about waist high, well in front of the body and pointed at your opponent. Grip racket with right hand, balance with left and assume a comfortable crouch—ready to move in any direction the moment your opponent hits the ball.

How to place your shot accurately? What's the right grip for forehand strokes? How to outwit even good players, catch them off guard?

In our 40-page booklet, "How to Improve Your Tennis," Mercer Beasley, teacher of many champions, shows you by instructions and diagrams how to play winning tennis. Explains different strokes, footwork, offensive and defensive tennis. Gives charts illustrating tennis strategy, pointers on tournaments, tennis rules. For beginners and advanced players.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "How to Improve Your Tennis," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and name of booklet.

Rhubarb-Pineapple Sherbet a Refreshing Delicacy

WHILE rhubarb is still in the pink and so very reasonable in price, treat your family to the delicious frozen combination of rhubarb and pineapple. It is called Rhubarb-Pineapple Sherbert, but would be as delicious by any other name. The combination of the tart rhubarb and tangy pineapple is delightfully refreshing. There's both taste lure and eye appeal to this frozen delicacy. Here's the recipe for a tempting summer treat:

Rhubarb-Pineapple Sherbet

Wash rhubarb. Remove blemishes but do not peel. Cut in small pieces to make 2½ cups. Combine with 1 No. 1 can crushed pineapple (1 1-3 cups) and ½ cup sugar and simmer until tender. Press through a course sieve. There should be 2 cups pulp and sirup. Chill. Whip 1 cup cream very stiff. Fold in chilled rhubarb mixture. Pour at once into refrigerator tray. Yield, about 1 quart.

Rhubarb upside-down cake, topped with puffs of delicious whipped cream, is another dessert to stimulate appetites. Follow your favorite recipe for upside-down cake and spread with the rhubarb topping made as follows:

Rhubarb Topping—Mix 4 cups rhubarb that has been cut in ½-inch pieces with 8 quartered marshmallows and 1 cup sugar. Spread in the bottom of a buttered 10-inch iron skillet or heavy cake pan and top with cake batter and bake.

Today's Health Talk

The Mysteries of Acids, Alkalies Are Explained by Physician

I hear a good many questions which show a puzzled state of mind, and go something like this:

"Fruit juices are acid; therefore, they should produce a condition of acidity in the body. Yet doctors say that they really turn to alkaline salts and produce alkalinity rather than acidity. If this is so, why is it that in cases of ulcer of the stomach they irritate rather than soothe, whereas if they turned to alkalies they should neutralize the acidity that is present in stomach ulcer and make the condition better?"

It is true that fruit juices are acid. It is also true that they are turned to alkaline salts and do not produce real acidity. It is also true that they irritate an acid dyspepsia whereas an alkali should soothe it.

The answer is that fruit juices do not act as an alkali in the stomach. All fruits have organic acids and these acids form alkaline salts but they do so in the intestine. While they are in the stomach they are still acid and, therefore, irritate or make worse an acid dyspepsia or a stomach ulcer.

A great many people are afraid to eat tomatoes or lemons because they think they will produce a condition of acidity and cause symptoms like rheumatism or stiffness of the fingers and joints. This is not true. These juices are rapidly put out of the stomach and turned to alkaline salts in the intestine and in that condition enter the blood.

The only exception to this statement is that prunes and cranberries do turn into acid salts.

Is it safe to vaccinate children in the summer?

Yes. In fact, summer is a very good time to catch up on immunizations if they have not been done before. Some physicians prefer to vaccinate against smallpox in the spring or autumn but there does not seem to be any scientific reason advanced why or how hot weather affects a vaccination unfavorably. Perhaps a little more precaution about infection of the vaccination wound is required in the summer on account of the possibility of sweat infecting it or the more moist condition of the skin predisposing the maceration and sloughing, but these are easy to overcome.

One other precaution is for the doctor to remember—smallpox vaccine dies readily in very hot weather and if the stock is not kept in refrigeration the vaccination will not "take." But vaccine virus is so regularly kept refrigerated that this reminder seems hardly necessary.

If for some reason a child has not been vaccinated against diphtheria, whooping cough, typhoid fever and smallpox before entering school, the first vacation period is an excellent time to remedy this.

If camp activity is planned, it should be remembered that the child who is being immunized may be deprived of swimming or playing in the sand for a week or two after any vaccination, but this, again, is an easy matter of adjustment.

Essentially—that is, scientifically—there is no reason why vaccination should not be done in the summer.

Mary Haworth's Mail

On Eve of Divorcing Man Whose Emotional Incompetence Distracts Her, Woman Finds They Are to Have a Baby

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 29 years old and my husband is 41. I met him when I was teaching and studying on the side for my doctor's degree. I must admit that I married him on the rebound, after a most unhappy love affair. I married him three years ago because he was the kindest person I knew—except for my mother. That quality of kindliness and consideration which first attracted me to him still exists—but I am sorry that he should be married to a woman as restless, ambitious and emotional as I; for he could be so happy with one of his own kind.

I had thought that my greater education and social experience would compensate for his lack of education and negative personality. He is unattractive in appearance—his greatest charm being his kindness and simple, placid outlook on life. He does nothing educationally or socially to advance himself. He is completely self-satisfied, and the fact that for 18 years he has worked in the same capacity for the same salary (under $2,000) seems unimportant to him. Not until after we were married did I know about his low salary and lack of sexual virility—which latter explains more than anything else, I think, why I do not love him.

If marriage means emotional reciprocity, I have had none of it. It was months after the wedding before he claimed me as his wife, and such periods have recurred, time and again. I would have left my husband at the very beginning, had not personal pride, and the fact of an elaborate church wedding, spurred me to try to go through with it. In an attempt to overcome my disappointment, I buried myself in teaching and church work, and spent hours working in the garden and beautifying our small home. But work is neither emotional substitute nor release.

We have never quarrelled. Superficially, we get along well together. But there are times when I could scream and actually have to fight down a desire to hurl myself at him. Yet I have never behaved in any but a dignified, controlled way. Since I consider myself his superior I must be superior. Last year, after two years' marriage, I came near having a nervous breakdown. I visited a well known minister and told him of my life. It was a wonderful relief to unburden myself to a man of God and of wisdom.

Early this year, I decided to save money for a Reno divorce as soon as school closed. I wanted a divorce and a new chance to continue work on my degree and make a better life. I planned it all so carefully. But man proposes and God disposes. I found myself pregnant—two months ago. I simply couldn't believe it, at first. But my doctor confirmed the condition, although he said he would "do anything" to help me—as he, too, felt I would be making a mistake in trying to stay married on so poor a foundation. I think I know what he meant when he said he would "do anything." But I cannot and will not accept that way out. I am going to have the baby.

But what in the world can I look forward to? What have I to offer the baby, who doesn't mean a thing to me? Instead of symbolizing mutual love and a joint blessing, it is simply an incredible accident. I am cruel enough to be afraid the baby might resemble his father. With such selfish feelings, and with no love, admiration or desire for the father, what right have I to bring the child into the world?

I am praying for my weakness and indecision; for my fear of hurting my husband's feelings. For three years, I have lived with a man whom I look down upon; and whom no one would ever imagine to be my husband—a man who suffers in comparison with the husbands of other successful, attractive women. It is a bitter, taunting picture, and the future frightens me.

LADY IN WAITING.

Detour to Happiness Has Not Been Explored

DEAR L. I. W.: Have you profited by your "greater education," your social and intellectual "superiority," to the extent of addressing yourself intelligently to the solution of the problem presented by your husband's sometime psychic impotence? Apparently not. On the contrary, you have been largely preoccupied with resenting the situation it creates, and with foggy plans for washing your hands of the problem sooner or later, some how or other.

Would it not have been more reasonable, more constructive, to assume that his "lack of virility"—which is chiefly responsible for your wretchedness — was significantly related to his characteristic mental and physical lethargy? Was not the whole condition suggestive of glandular imbalance and perhaps organic debility, resulting in functional disorders and general apathy?—all of which might have been wonderfully and gratifyingly rectified, if his case had been brought to the attention of some first-rank diagnostician and internist.

As I see the picture, you have wasted three years burrowing your head into the sands, when you might have been taking seven-league strides toward happiness. There is nothing in your story to indicate that you have made an open, honest, intelligent, systematic effort to evoke,—with scientific aid and instruction,—emotional reciprocity in the relationship. Instead of trying to help the situation, you have unwittingly done the one thing calculated to make it a thousand times worse,—namely, insistently registered "superiority," (of no doubt iceberg temperature and proportions), until you have abashed the poor man out of the last vestigial shreds of his self esteem, which should have been preserved at all costs if his emotional incompetence were eventually to be overcome.

Now that you are committed (by "incredible accident") to the proposition of having a child, obviously it would be folly to seek divorce—at least, for the present. The domestic status quo must be maintained for another year at a minimum, I should think. And it is downright absurd to give yourself over to the nightmare brooding of emotional frustration, during those months to come, when you should be and could be going into action to make something worthwhile out of the obligatory alliance.

Since your mannerisms of pride, dignity, rigid self control and self conscious superiority are just so much spirit-breaking deadwood, I think you should cast them aside, and bespeak your frantic discontent with wifely and pardonable frankness, in a thoroughly human manner. Instead of unburdening your soul to a minister, tell your remarkably (and providentially!) kind and considerate husband exactly how you feel, and implore him in the name of heaven to get busy and do something about it, lest you have a nervous breakdown and divorce him to boot.

Tell him you are going to have a baby or you would be leaving already. Make it plain that you, as a couple, have before you one year of grace during which—if the marriage is to endure—the factors resulting in your anemic relationship must be diagnosed and corrected. And don't overlook the possibility that you, in your way, may be as much at fault as he is in his way. Definitely that superiority attitude of yours is to be distrusted.

As for what you have to give the baby,—don't be mawkish and hysterical. Babies have a way of bringing their welcome with them; and who (of the ancestral line-up) they happen to look like was never known to prevent a normal woman and legitimate mother from regarding them,—after arrival,—as being precisely perfect, as is. Your life lies before you, to make of it what you will; and if you haven't made much of it yet, it probably is because you haven't applied yourself in the right direction.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Exercise, Orange Juice Beauty Secret of Star

Hilda Burke, Opera Singer, Does Calisthenics Regularly; Depends on Fruits, Vegetables For Good Complexion, Lovely Figure

By Ida Jean Kain

THE MORE lovely celebrities we see, the more firmly we are convinced that the mainstay of beauty is will power—and not a bank balance! Not that jewels, furs and coiffeurs don't count. They do, we're sure, but not nearly as much as generally imagined.

Take Hilda Burke, the beautiful, blonde Metropolitan opera soprano. If you were to pass her on the street you would certainly turn around to gaze after her. And you might reasonably suppose that "There goes a woman who can spend all the time and money she likes on her looks—

But if you were to pin Miss Burke right down to a detailed account of her beauty program, it is more than likely that you would be disappointed! "Why" you'd say to yourself, "she doesn't do a solitary thing I can't do!"

Morning Calisthenics

She doesn't! But she knows how important those things are and does them. If you did calisthenics for 45 minutes every morning of your life you would have as good a figure as Miss Burke! She never misses! And sometimes she does an additional 15 minutes of stretching in the evening to round out the day. She hasn't missed exercising for two years—not since she had a severe cold and the doctor said not to for a couple of days.

Her exercises are not unusual, but they aren't in the sissy class, either! One of her standbys is this: Sit down on the floor with the legs straight, and hold the arms straight out from the shoulders in front. Keeping the back straight, tummy muscles pulled up, "kick" with the right leg and try to touch the right hand, then with the left leg to touch the left hand. Do not move the arms down to touch the toes! Keep that up for 50 counts!

After you have relaxed, go on to this one . . . Still sitting on the floor, spread the legs wide apart, knees straight. Stretch the arms up overhead, pressing them against the head. Then, revolve at the waist and salaam, trying to bring the trunk as close as possible to alternate legs while maintaining the upstretch through the midriff.

Those two exercises will give you an idea of her calisthenics. She prefers hunting, and thinks a day-after-day tramp through the woods is the best possible way of streamlining. She also enjoys tennis and bicycling but the daily exercise that can be performed on a mat in the living room or on a roof is the kind she relies on. By the way, her idea of a deluxe beauty treatment is to relax for half an hour in the sun!

Orange Juice by Quart

Weight control, she declares, needn't be given a thought "if you eat the right foods—and you can eat plenty of those!" Miss Burke likes to prepare for an arduous concert by drinking orange juice, plenty of it, and little else, the day before. Sometimes she drinks two or three quarts. She says, "It makes my throat feel so good"—which isn't bad logic, because orange juice is full of vitamin C, which has to do with the health of the respiratory tract.

But orange juice is really a habit, and one she finds useful in weight control. She drinks a glass whenever she feels thirsty—and finds she isn't nearly as hungry when mealtime rolls around. That might be a good reducing tip for you!

Did I tell you that her skin is like the traditional peaches and cream? She has found that the starch, fatty foods which are so fattening also make blotchy complexions, and she stays away from them.

"I could learn to like ice cream with chocolate sauce and nuts, too" she says reflectively, "but I don't dare!" Therefore, her favorite summer dish is cold spinach with a dash of lemon, and sometimes a drop of oil! "It's a complexion tonic," Miss Burke assures me.

If you have a weight control problem it is not a good policy to eat at night before going to bed! Foraging after regular meal hours is a notorious fat-maker, and it may be the main cause of your overweight. It's worth checking.

That's all there is . . . that's the program Hilda Burke follows! And if you follow one as sensible, you'll wind up by giving beauty hints too!

Tricky Shoes For Fall Wear

Variations on the shankless shoe with fantastic heel were shown in quantity at a New York meeting of shoe manufacturers. They'll be pushed for late summer, early fall wear.

You'll be a strong-minded woman if you don't eventually buy some of the trick-heeled output. New designs live up to their names: Sled, tractor, sleigh, crescent wedge, suspension, pyramid, keg, peg, Dutch boy, pinched wedge.

A visiting shoemaker observed that few wedge soles were worn at the World's Fair. He was surprised, because wedgies sold well this spring. This department is not surprised, and suggests that the shoemaker try wearing wedgies for a few weeks. He'll find the stiff, inflexible arch is uncomfortable and causes an awkward gait.

3 Honorary Degrees Given; Joe Louis' Sister in Class

Degrees were conferred by Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson at Howard University yesterday on 260 graduates at the seventy-first annual commencement exercises, held on the campus before Douglass Hall.

The honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred on John W. Davis, president of the West Virginia State University, on Myles W. Paige, magistrate of the City of New York, and on A. Philip Randolph, head of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

Dr. Davis was cited for 29 years of constructive endeavor in the field of education, and more particularly for the development of the West Virginia institution.

The citation given Dr. Randolph referred to years of unrelenting endeavor in the field of organization, and his unassuming loyalty to a cause in spite of lethargy and opposition.

The commencement address was made by Dr. Buell Gordon Gallagher, president of Talladega College, Talladega, Ala., who cautioned his hearers to avoid hypocrisy. He advised them of the necessity of frank compromise.

Musical numbers were from Gounod's "Faust," recently played by musical societies of the university. At the conclusion of the exercises, Dr. Johnson presented the heavyweight champion, Joe Louis, whose sister, Vunies Barrow, was given the degree of bachelor of arts, cum laude, and presented by the champion with an automobile.

Methodists Elect Lay Leaders

1,000 Women At Baltimore Conference Hear Drinking Deplored

By the Associated Press

Westminster, Md., June 7.—The 750 delegates to the Baltimore Annual Conference of the Methodist Church tonight elected lay leaders for the coming year, while more than 1,000 women, attending the special women's day program, heard deplored "the fact that Methodists are among those who are drinking."

Elected lay leaders for the Washington East District are D. S. Patterson, O. O. Thomen and Col. A. R. Brindley. Those for the Washington west area will be J. P. Crawford, John H. Ray and W. E. Ehinger.

Elected an elder at a meeting of ministers was the Rev. Francis Irwin Cockrell, of the Bethesda Methodist Church.

After 46 years in the ministry the Rev. J. M. Gillum, of Brookland Church, Washington, was granted retirement from active service.

Two Ministers Admitted

The Rev. Raymond Holesworth Firth, of Washington, and the Rev. Elgar Clyde Soper, of Olney, Md., were among those admitted on trial into the conference.

It was indicated last night that the conference, over which Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of Washington, is presiding, will end with the reading of appointments and ordinations services Sunday.

The report of the board of conference claimants, adopted after an hour's discussion, recommended that all claimants be paid at the same annuity rate and the rate be fixed at approximately $22 for the conference year 1940-1941.

The board also recommended that amounts paid from receipts from invested funds be supplemented by payments from apportionments on the churches.

Mrs. Morgan Presides

Apportionments on the churches would not exceed 12 per cent of the total salaries of pastors and district superintendents and one-half of 1 per cent of this would go for relief.

The special women's day program was presided over by Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, of Washington.

The principal address was given by Mrs. E. Pearce Hayes, formerly a missionary in China. Others on the program included Mrs. Ross A. Davis and Mrs. T. R. Matthews, both of Baltimore, and Mrs. Ida A. Groover, Washington.

Government Has New Deadly Gun To Fight Insects

Development of a new deadly gun was announced yesterday by the Federal Government.

The specifications are not being kept a secret.

Considered the deadliest weapon yet—against disease-carrying mosquitoes—the defensive weapon is a spray gun perfected by two United State Public Health Service experts to prevent the spread of malaria and yellow fever by transoceanic airplanes.

Dr. Charles L. Williams, assistant surgeon general in charge of the service's quarantine division, made the announcement yesterday. The device was developed by Dr. G. L. Dunnahoo and H. A. Johnson, sanitary engineer. Their work was carried on at the Miami, Fla., airport, terminus of Central and South American air transports.

Guilty Verdict Found in Slaying In Nearby Md.

Ray W. Barkley, of the 3400 block of Sixteenth street northwest, was convicted of manslaughter by a jury in the Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro, Md., yesterday. Barkley was accused in the fatal shooting of Alfred Downs at the Green Oaks Tavern last January 2.

The jury deliberated for more than an hour and a half after hearing a day and a half of testimony.

Defense Attorneys Frank T. Hall and George Burroughs based a self-defense plea on testimony that Downs had attempted to shoot Barkley with a shotgun on the morning of the day of the killing and had threatened him with the weapon when the fatal shot was fired.

States Attorney H. Winship Wheatley, jr., based the State's case on the two statements that Barkley, after leaving the scene of the altercation which preceded the actual shooting, obtained the pistol he had borrowed and returned to confront Downs with it, and that two of the six bullets, including the fatal one, entered Downs' back.

Testimony offered by both the State's witnesses and those for the defense agreed as to the facts of the case. All agreed that Downs had previously fired at Barkley, and had struck him twice with a rifle barrel before Barkley shot.

Glen Echo Crash Kills 1, Hurts 3

Cars Meet Head-on; Washington Man Is Crushed Under Wheels of Truck

The twenty-eighth traffic fatality this year, and the third in four days was recorded here yesterday when a colored man was crushed under the wheels of a Sewer Department truck.

Another man was killed and his girl companion and two other persons were injured in a head-on collision on Conduit road near Glen Echo, Md. The dead man is Melvin Eugene Bell, 22, of Vienna, Va.

The Washington accident, similar to one which took the life of a 7-year-old boy Thursday, occurred in the 3300 block of Rittenhouse street northwest, when James O. Chisley, 24, of 1233 Union Court southwest, jumped from the truck to retrieve his hat.

Police said the truck, operated by Clarence Fairfax, 38, of 1517 U street northwest, was carrying lumber to a WPA project and that Chisley was riding just behind the cab. When his hat blew off, Chisley called to the driver to stop, police said, but jumped to the street before the vehicle halted.

He was dead when a doctor from Emergency Hospital arrived. Fairfax will appear at an inquest the date of which has not been set.

Passenger Injured

Injured in the crash which killed Bell were his passenger, Miss Lucille Dawson, 22, of 3255 P street northwest; A. Rivington Stone, 31, of 5620 Sherrier place northwest, said by police to be driver of the other automobile, and his wife, Mrs. Pauline Stone.

Bell was taken by the Glen Echo rescue squad to Georgetown Hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival. The others suffered cuts and bruises.

A White Oak (Md.) mother and her two children were injured when their automobile was in collision with a truck at Four Corners, Md. Mrs. Fred B. Mills, 41; her daughter, Eileen, 16, and her son, Fred, jr., 10, suffered bruises and shock. Police said the truck was operated by Clarence E. Wesley, colored, 28, of 5357 Hayes street northeast.

Cab Driver Struck

Clarence Beall, 52, a cab driver, of 56 New York avenue northwest, was seriously injured when struck by a street car while crossing at Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. At Emergency Hospital, where he was taken in a passing cab, he was said to have contusions of the head.

When she walked into the rear of an automobile at Seventh and E streets northwest, according to police, Grace Keltner, 32, of 1609 D street northeast, received head injuries. Police said the automobile was operated by Naomi J. Alsop, 29, of 230 Seventh street northeast.

Betty Smith, 9, of 460 H street northwest, received scalp lacerations by walking into a moving truck at Seventh and K streets northwest, police reported. They said the truck was operated by Howard W. Harrison, 33, of Glen Echo, Md.

Ella V. Smith, 66, of 1501 U street southeast, was struck at Michigan avenue and U street southeast by an automobile, police said was operated by John B. James, of 1875 Good Hope road southeast. She was treated by private physician for body bruises and shock.

Dr. L. J. Briggs Again Heads Weights Group

200 Delegates End Parley Here; Urge Standard Containers

More than 200 State and municipal weights and measures officials left Washington yesterday committed to support of new legislation, both Federal and local, which will give the consumer greater protection.

Before adjourning its meeting at the Hotel Mayflower, the thirtieth National Conference on Weights and Measures reelected Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, director of the Bureau of Standards, president, and chose Ralph W. Smith as secretary. The latter, also a Bureau of Standards official, has been acting secretary since the death of Dr. F. S. Holbrook last February.

The conference voted several amendments to its "model law," a uniform measure which the various States are urged to adopt. One prohibits food sellers from posting signs which are misleading, though not untruthful, as to price and quantity. Another standardizes sizes of flour packages.

Also approved by the conference were three bills, proposed for introduction in Congress, which would standardize containers of food shipped in interstate commerce, and prevent fraud and deception of the consumer.

Newly elected vice presidents are Joseph G. Rogers, Trenton, N. J.; Carl Klocker, Hartford, Conn.; Louis G. Waldman, St. Louis, Mo., and Thomas Webb, Nashville, Tenn. A. J. Jensen, Bismarck, N. Dak., and H. N. Davis, Montpelier, Vt., were reelected vice presidents. George F. Austin, jr., Detroit, was reelected treasurer.

Pepco Gets Radio Station Zone Permit

D. C. Commission Approves Change At Benning Power Plant

The District Zoning Commission yesterday approved a change in zoning at the Benning power plant to permit installation of a radio transmitter which will serve emergency repair trucks of the Potomac Electric Power Co. and the Capital Transit Co.

Although plans for the radio system had been prepared by the company before the war, the system will fit in with War Department plans for the protection of the Capital's utilities. Property at the Benning plant had been zoned residential.

The commission went a step further by amending its regulations to permit erection of transmitters on residential property if the Board of Zoning Adjustment deems it in the "public convenience and welfare."

The proposal of W. Waverly Taylor to erect a large "park and shop" development in the area south of Mount Alto Hospital was denied.

In addition to the Pepco appeal the commission approved six other zoning changes. They are:

Extend the second commercial 60 "D" area district to include 205-223 Q street northwest.

Extend second commercial 60 "D" area district to include three sides of a square bounded by C. Canal streets and Delaware avenue southwest. The Commission refused to change the present zoning of South Capitol street, the fourth side of the square.

'Brother Orchid,' on Earle Screen, Is a 'Different' Gangster Comedy

Edward G. Robinson Stars in Title Role, With Able Support; Breezy Stage Bill

"BROTHER ORCHID." Warner Brothers picturization of the short story by Richard Connell, adapted to the screen by Earl Baldwin, starring Edward G. Robinson, with Ann Sothern, Humphrey Bogart, Donald Crisp, Ralph Bellamy, Allen Jenkins, Charles D. Brown, Cecil Kellaway, Morgan Conway, Richard Lane, Paul Guilfoyle, Joseph Crehan, Wilfred Lucas, Tom Tyler, Granville Bates, Nanette Vallon and numerous others. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. Previewed Monday, June 3. At the Earle Theater.

Although Edward G. Robinson is something less than orchidaceous in the title role, the Warner Brothers' adaptation of Richard Connell's yarn of "Brother Orchid," blossoms out on the Earle screen this week as a rare sort of gangster comedy.

BELL

Possessing all of the explosive qualities of the typical underworld melodrama, it also presents a subtly impressive story of regeneration and is heavily shot through with comedy. It is no more conscious of any serious purpose—beyond that of sheer entertainment—than the same company's "Torrid Zone." Fist fights, gun battles and a nonsectarian monastery may not sound like prolific sources of abdominal laughter, but the business, nevertheless, has been successfully wangled in the present instance.

Little Johnny Sarto admitted that he was a pretty tough hombre, but confessed also that underneath his overdressed exterior throbbed a soul yearning for the better things of life. So he turned his mob over to his first lieutenant and hied him away to Europe to put a polish on his "class." On the other side, they put a polish on his bank roll, and by the time he got back to the States there was one on his blue serge suit. So his former henchmen put him on the spot, blew him moderately full of holes and left him for dead, when, as a matter of fact, he was crawling to the Floracian Monastery, where the Brothers raised flowers for the city market and gave their profits to the poor.

When his fellow racketeers clamped down on the Floracian enterprise, "Brother Orchid" visited the city, A. W. O. L., mopped up the hoodlums and decided that the kindly Brothers had the kind of "class" he had been seeking all his life, but never could find on the handle end of a racket.

All that may not sound especially funny, but Edward G. Robinson gets so thoroughly into his character and plays it so naively that he is continuously amusing. He is amply aided by Ann Sothern, as Flo Addams, the "moll" he is going to marry just as soon as he can find time; Ralph Bellamy, as her honest and slightly simple wooer from the wide open West, and Allen Jenkins, who declares himself "nuts," to elude gang vengeance in a sanitarium. The racket boys are a magnificent bunch of thugs, led by Humphrey Bogart, the cinema's ace gunman Donald Crisp is the placid Father Superior of the Floracians, but still finds opportunity to reveal a sly sense of humor. It is very nice going on both sides of the proscenium.

Harry Anger's "Red, Hot and Glorious" stage revue is considerably breezier than the street levels, too. The living bill is headlined by Cardini, who still executes his card and cigarette tricks with bewildering skill. It is opened by the "Hollywood Canine Mimics," a novel dog act, and, in turn, introduces Vic Hyde, the "one man band," and Lynn, Royce and Vanya "ballroom" dancers, who combine real grace with rough-and-tumble comedy. The Roxyettes are in and out, as usual, the Red Cross and "Chimes" numbers being their best.

Eileen Ritter's "Sing-a-Song-With-Mike" augments the bill with a rousing "community sing" that went over with a bang at yesterday's first performance. Paramount News presents the first pictures—heavily censored—of the evacuation of Dunkirk, under heavy Nazi fire, and a "Popular Science" release discloses why American airplanes are best, to complete an A-1 hot-weather entertainment.

The Little 'Big Shot' Pitches Woo!

Spencer Tracy Assumes Role Of 'Edison, the Man,' at Capitol

By Richard L. Coe

"EDISON THE MAN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of an original story by Dore Schary and Hugo Butler, adapted to the screen by Talbot Jennings and Bradbury Foote, starring Spencer Tracy, with Rita Johnson, Lynn Overman, Charles Coburn, Gene Lockhart, Henry Travers, Felix Bressart, Peter Godfrey, Guy D'Ennery, Arthur Aylesworth, Gene Reynolds, Addison Richards, Grant Mitchell, Paul Hurst, George Lessey, Jay Ward and Ann Gillis. Directed by Clarence Brown. Previewed Friday, May 31. At the Capitol Theater.

The admirable actor Spencer Tracy brings his persuasive ability to M-G-M's second and concluding film suggested by the life of Thomas A. Edison. A companion piece to the earlier Mickey Rooney picture, "Young Tom Edison," this depiction of the inventor's maturity is titled "Edison, the Man," and opened on the Capitol screen yesterday.

With an avowed predilection for screen biography and its endless possibilities, this observer found it a screen play of more definitive interest than its antecedent and quite as engaging, thanks to the eloquence of Mr. Tracy. By a flash-back method we relive the earlier and apparently the most dramatic years of the inventor's life and at the close of the film return to the opening shots, depicting the man of 82 being honored on the fiftieth anniversary of the electric light.

Just how much of this story is the inventor's drama and how much the dramatists' invention the reviewer cannot say. One feels that the eventful night on which the New York testing area was lighted is rather intensely dramatized. Since the electric light of 1882 is the last invention whose birth is dramatized, his second marriage, in 1886, to Mina Miller is not revealed nor are those years in which, just before his death, he struggled to find a substitute for rubber.

Film Expertly Produced

However, his genial and understanding nature are better known than the events of his life and it is this quality upon which the writers have laid their emphasis. His generosity to a boy assistant, who breaks his first possible electric light, his quiet talk with two school journalists when, at 80, the world honors him, his appetite for milk and apple pie and his incessant questioning of the everyday things around him, and how they may be put to man's advantage, make, in Tracy's hands, a forthright and moving figure. Clarence Brown's reverential direction does not lack a saving humor and M-G-M's production details are customarily immaculate.

Rita Johnson plays the first Mrs. Edison with sympathetic ability, Lynn Overman is his quaintly amusing self and Charles Coburn, Gene Lockhart, Henry Travers and Felix Bressart are outstanding in the supporting cast.

Bright Stage Bill

On the Capitol stage, that minuscular Georgia peach, Dixie Dunbar, all but stops the show with her adroit tappings and her stage-trained footlight presence. To the list of Hollywood folk who have something to offer the variety fans, add the name of the cute Dixie. With her are four tallish chaps, tappers, too, who bring further well-being to an act that ranks with the best of its kind.

Much fun is the good-natured rivalry of Organist Art Brown and Conductor Sam Jack Kaufman. With an electric organ and slippery piano they are joined by the Rockets at tinkling pianos for a neat finale. Before that, Brown unlooses the communal throats in song and Kaufman conducts Offenbach's "Orpheus" with a bow for Violinist Max Zinder. The orchestra also plays Mendelssohn's "Fangal's Cave" for a spectacular undersea ballet.

The Shyrettos, amazing and vim-filled cyclists, score heavily in their act and Jerry Lester is an amusing jester, particularly when imitating a lighthouse!

Sweaters to Crew, Vivien Leigh Gifts

Vivien Leigh had writer's cramp when she completed her starring picture with Robert Taylor, "Waterloo Bridge," having autographed 156 photos for the crew of the company, stand-ins, wardrobe and make-up girls.

The star had so many requests for autographed photographs that she ordered the extra portraits and signed her name for all who wanted them, so no one would be disappointed. Moreover, there was the present of a sweater from Miss Leigh for every member of the crew.

She left the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot for her stage production of "Romeo and Juliet," with Laurence Olivier.

"And I sincerely hope to return some time in the future," she said.

Carroll's Theater Used in New Film

Hollywood's most expensive motion picture set today was turned over to Paramount ready for use.

The set is the Earl Carroll theater-restaurant on Sunset boulevard which will be used in the filming of Paramount's 'A Night at Earl Carroll's."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 7.

AILMENT: "Like everything else in my eventful life," George Jessel wires, "the report of my illness has been grossly exaggerated" . . . Tuesday night Jessel phoned me, from Hollywood, assuring that the injury to his face was only a slight one. "It's drawn up one side of my mouth," said Jessel, "which makes me talk, more than ever, like George M. Cohan. I like that" . . . "But suppose it's permanent?" I asked . . . "Then I'll do one thing," Jessel stated. "I'll produce 'The Tavern.'"

MISFORTUNE: A young man named Charles Baumgartner has been living in the same house with Sid Silvers, the actor-writer, and sharing the latter's reverses . . . Last week he entered Silvers' room, and asked: "Is it true that you wrote that hit-song, 'Did You Mean It'?" . . . "Yes," Silvers acknowledged, beamingly . . . "And," continued Baumgartner, pursuing his quarry, "is it true that you made $40,000 in royalties from that song?" . . . "Yes, I guess I did," Silvers replied, without reluctance . . . "Say, Sid," his companion then asked, "can you lend me a quarter?" . . . Silvers dislodged the trap. "If I were you, Charlie," he reared, 'I'd hold out for the $40,000, or nothing."

FAME: John Monks, jr., and Fred F. Finklehoffe, the authors of "Brother Rat," wrote a new musical comedy and brought it to Max Gordon . . . The producer expressed interest in it, and suggested that Cole Porter might be induced to write the songs . . . "No, we don't want Porter," Monks insisted. "We have a fellow named Charlie Gaynor, who'll write all the songs" . . . "Gaynor? Gaynor? Never heard of him," said Gordon . . . "That's because he hasn't had a chance, as yet," Finklehoffe explained, "but I guarantee that, in three years, he'll be better than Cole Porter" . . . "Then bring him around," Max Gordon replied, "in three years."

SUCCESS: When Ethel Merman worked as a secretary-stenographer, before risking a career in the theater, her employer would have her put calls through to the captain of his yacht, Capt. Christianson. Miss Merman always was impressed by this, and never has forgotten . . . Ethel now owns her own yacht, purchased last month. She has just hired a captain for it—the same Capt. Christianson.

CHATTER: The S. S. President Jackson, first of the Dollar Lines 7 round-the-world cruise-ships, was constructed to special specifications. Despite the luxury-liner motif, it can be converted into an armed transport on short order . . . The contract for scrapping New York Ninth avenue elevated, will feature a clause prohibiting the purchaser of the scrap-iron from selling it to any foreign nation . . . Jimmy Roosevelt has retired from the Phonovision enterprise . . . Milton Berle, who just had his nose re-shaped, is showing his new profile, and says: "From now on, I'm Milton Berlymore."

ENTERPRISE: Dorothy Thompson has a new experience to treasure among her exciting memories. During her recent visit to the Maginot Line, she was permitted to fire one of the guns . . . When Miss Thompson returned to America last week, John Gunther telephoned her, expressed regret at the necessity of asking such a question—but, as a radio commentator doing his duty, asked it: "What's new?" . . . He heard no answer for a long time—only an awesome silence . . . "Are you on, Dorothy?" Gunther said . . . The voice then spoke: "Ghastly, just ghastly."

SETTLEMENT: The settlement of the Government's civil case against Moe Annenberg, involving more than $7,000,000, was made on this basis: He will pay it in installments, $1,000,000 every July 1, plus interest at 6 per cent, until the entire amount is paid.

TRIUMPH: Zoltan Korda, brother of Alexander Korda, now is directing "The Thief of Bagdad." He has directed movies all over the world—in India, the Sudan, Egypt, Germany, France, Hungary, Afghanistan, England—but never, until last week did he direct a film in Hollywood. While extras milled around, camera-crews busied themselves with Technicolor apparatus, and a host of aides hurried through the studio, Korda, the veteran director, made his debut in the world center of film production. The first scene he shot showed a platter of hot dogs simmering in a frying-pan.

Trans-Lux

The first pictures of the British evacuation of the shattered port of Dunkirk are now at the Trans-Lux. The B. E. F. is seen fighting its way across the Channel in every sort of craft from tiny row-boats to regular transports, while great pillars of black smoke rise over the doomed city. Admittedly cut considerably by the British censor, these pictures are still among the most important of the pictorial history of World War II now being made. The Tommies seemed in high spirits and fine morale despite the punishment they'd taken.

Other war phases shown included bombed French cities, the speed-up in English munitions factories and the endless stream of refugees now pouring into Paris. American defense preparations and statements by William Green and Mrs. Dwight Morrow concerning the war were also given prominence.

Norway in Summary

"Norway's Fate" is a summation of the present Norwegian situation, calling attention to the resources that have fallen into German hands, concluding with the defiant statement, "Norway Will Rise Again."

Donald Duck and Goofy go in for bill-posting with interruptions by a belligerent billy goat. The cause of comedy is served, too, by Our Gang in "Hollywood Premiere."

Sports events in great variety lighten the program. There are shots of the Indianapolis races, horse races at Belmont, aquaplaning, declaration by Joe Louis and Arturo Godoy. But the prize is a shot of a mallard duck doing fancy dives to outwit a retriever. It's a part of retriever training.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

(While Louella O. Parsons is on her Honolulu vacation, this column is being written by her daughter, Harriett Parsons, producer of "Screen Snapshots.")

Hollywood, June 7 (1939).—So many of our movie stars have adopted children in the past few years that it's surprising someone hasn't thought sooner of making a film about the many foundlings who are placed with foster parents annually. Now M-G-M is planning just such a film. Studio has purchased "Blossoms in the Dust," an original by Ralph Wheelwright, and it will be Greer Garson's next starring vehicle. Irving Asher will produce.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Wheelwright's story is based on the life of Edna Gladney, head of the Texas children's home and aid society, which has found homes for more than 2,000 foundlings. Mrs. Gladney also pioneered a movement to legitimatize children born out of wedlock and as a result of her efforts Texas has passed laws to that end.

Understand that Producer-Director E. H. Griffith has received word from Madeleine Carroll that she is definitely leaving on the Clipper for Europe tomorrow. She hopes to bring her mother back from Paris and already has booked passage on the Clipper which lands in New York July 2. Miss Carroll will report immediately in Charlottesville, Va., for her role in "Virginia," which E. H. Griffith gets under way the first week in July. Madeleine has promised that even her much-discussed romance with that handsome French flying corps officer won't interfere with her return on schedule. But she may come back a war bride.

This and that: Otto Kruger has finished his role in Warners' "Man From Fleet Street," and reports immediately at Twentieth Century-Fox, where he'll replace Albert Basserman in "I Married a Nazi." Francis Lederer, playing the lead in the anti-Nazi opus, isn't making any secret of the torch he's carrying for his estranged wife, Margo. She's in Mexico City for a concert engagement and as soon as Francis completes his picture he'll hurry there to talk things over with her. . . . Marjorie Weaver gets one of the top spots in TC-F's "For Beauty's Sake," her first assignment since her P. A. tour three months ago. . . . Following his work in "Northwest Mounted," Preston Foster has had his option lifted by Para with a nice increase. Deal is for two pictures a year for the next three years.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Cesar Romero's condition is really serious and if he can't shake the flu bug pretty soon they'll have to postpone "Ghost of the Cisco Kid"; sorry to hear that Tommy Meighan's widow, Frances, is gravely ill at the Good Samaritan Hospital; that forced landing apparently didn't shake Jackie Coogan's nerve. He told the gang at La Conga that he's planning to pilot a ship to New York shortly.

Jane Wyman and Ronald Reagan, Bing Crosby and the Ritz Brothers among those who have reservations for the Andrews sisters opening at Casa Manana; "All This and Heaven Too" will be the first Hollywood movie "permeer" to be televisioned; Jack Benny and Mary Livingstone have rented a house at Laguna for two months; little Louella Ettinger had to miss several performances of "ice etchings of 1940" because of a severely strained ligament but hopes to be back in the show tonight; Jack Holt, this year's president of the Northridge Horse Show, has the flu so badly that his pal Paul Kelly has taken over most of his duties.

I certainly seem to be the little crepe hanger today. Maybe this will sound more cheerful; Jean Parker has signed a one-picture deal with Warners which may develop into a term contract; much gala at the little Hungary when Grace Moore and Valentin Parera were guests of the Lewis Milestones, and Marlene Dietrich occupied the adjoining table with Erich Remarque. A musician wandered between the two tables playing tunes from La Moore and La Dietrich's pictures and everybody joined in the singing. There. That's a brighter note.

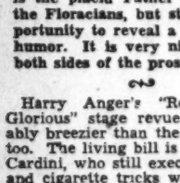
Hope tomorrow's news will be full of sunshine.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, June 7.

Dana Andrews, the boy Sam Goldwyn picked up at a gas station and signed, played his first part in "The Westerner." Now has a bigger part in "Kit Carson." Takes one-fourth of every pay check to his former bosses at the gas station, because they took a chance on him, too—paid for fixing his teeth.



HOPPER

Doug Fairbanks moved into his new home, which was practically a gift—price was so low. Formerly was the home of Elissa Landi. I wonder where she is and what she's doing. Doug certainly is busy. Serves on practically all war relief boards, wrote two short stories, is trying to produce a revue for the local Red Cross, and keeps a European map up to date with pins.

Gladys George, instead of Ona Munson, may do "The Life of Texas Guinan"—you know, the lady who originated the line, "Hello, sucker!"

Anna May Wong is running a one-woman Red Cross unit for the relief of the suffering Chinese, who have been pretty well forgotten since the hostilities began in Europe.

Frank Lloyd and Cary Grant started their own way of raising Red Cross funds. On "The Howards of Virginia" set, it costs a dollar to blow up in your lines. Cary Grant is going to campaign for the same deal on other lots.

Frank Fay is playing a priest with Carole Lombard and Charles Laughton in "The Other Man," while Harry Carey, who was doing a play in New York and expected to be in stock all summer, does the doctor with them. He and his wife are miserable because, expecting to be away, they leased their place as a dude ranch—now they have to live in town.

Bob Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck are planning a South American trip for their vacation, which seems the only safe place to go these days. Bob's tied up with Norma Shearer on "Escape," and Bob Montgomery stays on in London, so neither can play with Katharine Hepburn in "Philadelphia Story." Now it looks as though Jimmy Stewart and Walter Pidgeon will get the parts.

One of the funniest dances I've seen in a long time was Ginger Rogers, Ronnie Colman, Cissie Loftus and Brandon Tinon, who's almost as fat as Mahatma Ghandi, doing the polka.

Leonard Wins 7th as Nats Beat Chisox, 3-2

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

We would have bet—with the usual results—that Manager Casey Stengel of the Bees would win his protest of a victory scored over his club by the Cincinnati Reds last week. We thought he went to League President Ford Frick with a pretty good case, but Mr. Frick somehow did not see eye to eye with us, or with Stengel, for that matter.

Anyway, Frick heaved Stengel's protest right back into Stengel's teeth and said he wouldn't entertain it. The Reds' 3-2 victory stood, said Frick, and Stengel was merely wasting his breath.

The protest concerned the winning run of the ball game. It may do no harm to reconstruct the circumstances. McCormick, of the Reds, singled to start the second inning. Ernie Lombard, the next batter, drew three straight balls. On the next pitch, Lombardi started for first base under the impression that Umpire Bill Stewart had called it the fourth ball. McCormick, seeing Lombardi start for first, leisurely jogged toward second.

To the great surprise of McCormick, Catcher Al Lopez of the Bees threw the ball to second base and McCormick was tagged out. Bill McKechnie, manager of the Reds, stormed on the field and demanded to know why there was a play on McCormick. Then he learned from Stewart that the umpire had called the last pitch a strike and McCormick was advancing at his own peril.

Whereupon the Reds squawked loudly, and Stewart called a conference of his fellow umpires. The upshot was that Stewart ordered McCormick back to first base. Ultimately, Lombardi doubled, and McCormick, who had been tagged out once, scored what proved to be the winning run.

Stengel meanwhile advised the umpires he was playing the game under official protest. He pointed out that if McCormick misunderstood the decision on the called strike, it wasn't the Bees' fault. Also, said Stengel, the base runner is supposed to protect himself at all times.

That's the protest he took to Frick, and we'd have wagered the last dime in the house that he would be upheld. This wasn't a case of protesting an umpire's judgment. It was a protest of an umpire's stupid mistake which cost the Bees the ball game. If a base runner chooses to try to advance at his own risk, which McCormick did, it's the base runner's blunder no matter how excusable it may be. Certainly it is not within the province of the umpire to let a guy who has been legitimately tagged out stay on base, any base.

We don't know about the National League umpires, but if they are no more competent than the American League's the N. L. has no reason to be proud of 'em. Of the 12 American League umpires there are no more than three who command any respect among the players and managers in the league, and in not naming names we are being charitable.

It's a comparatively soft job they have, and the pay would surprise you. Keeping out of trouble with the main office is a chief concern of most of 'em, because it means a new contract next year and perhaps a salary raise. They love the 18-to-1 games, where there can be little chance for grievous errors. They're happiest when the last out of the game has been made and for another day they have escaped being put on the spot.

Bill Summers was the last real good umpire to come into the American League, and that was about ten years ago. Most of 'em are entirely too much aware of what teams are playing and which players are involved in their decisions. It's an old charge that the Yankees get the most of the breaks in the officiating, and the next time you're at the ball park notice what happens when the pitcher has a three-ball-and-no-strike count on the batter.

Then you are apt to see what is known as the automatic strike. If it's Ruffing, or Lyons, or Grove, or Leonard, or some other established pitching star on the mound, the next pitch is ten-to-one to be a called strike if the batter doesn't offer at it. The umpires react as if those pitchers throw nothing but strikes in that emergency. But woe to the young pitcher or the fellow with a reputation for wildness in the same circumstancs. He has to come in there with one down the middle to get a strike on a 3-and-nothing count.

Ever since Bill McGowan came into the league and made a distinct hit not only with his competent umpiring but his theatrical flourishes, the newcomers to the umpiratical ranks have attempted to imitate him. But they don't have the saving grace of his ability, and their act has fallen flat. They seem to forget that no umpire ever drew an extra dollar through the gate. The fans don't pay to see umpires perform. Last month at Cincinnati, the Reds and the Cards went right ahead with a scheduled game despite the fact that no umpires had been assigned to it. The umpires' brotherhood probably hasn't recovered from that shock yet.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Cleveland, June 7.—Any of you folks ever hear tell of Ray Kamensky? What, you don't know Ray Kamensky, of the Warrensville (Ohio) Kamenskys? Great family. Slavs. And Ray is likely to win the greatest golf crown in the country—the U. S. Open.

CONSIDINE

If he does, his name will never get in the record book, and he'll be lucky to get $25, though the first prize is a grand. As a matter of fact, Ray Kamensky can't break a hundred. He does'nt know what to do with his big feet, or how to pivot, and he has a nasty habit of looking up with his dark, good-looking head, instead of down—when he's hitting a ball. He doesn't even own a set of golf canes.

He is Sam Snead's caddy. That means he is carrying the 14 sticks of a golfing master who has only a faint idea of just which one to use at a given moment. For all his native genius for the game, Sam Snead hasn't got half the eye for distance that a drunken driver has. He overclubs, as they say, more than any good golfer in the game. Unless he has a strong-willed caddy, he'll use a brassie where he should use a spoon, a 5-iron where he should use a 6-iron, and so on.

The day before the last Masters tournament he was over the green and in the deep brush on 11 straight holes. In the tournament itself he put a 5-iron shot 50 yards—straight and true—over the pin. Last year in the homestretch of the Open he tried to use a brassie out of the rough, and the club didn't have enough face on it to lift the ball high enough to keep it out of a trap. In the trap he used a 7-iron, and that wasn't deep faced enough because the ball hit the overhanging lip of the crater and sank into the tall grass on top of the bunker. To be brief, Snead took an eight on an easy hole. A par would have given him the championship. A bogie, or one over par, would have put him into a tie.

We saw him lose the Metropolitan Open in 1938 on the seventh hole by a single job of overclubbing. It is an easy drive and pitch affair, for a fellow of Snead's power. Sam made it a drive. He cranked up and belted the stuffings out of his second shot which cleared the green, jungle and the rubbish behind the green and a high wire fence. Sam dropped the guilty club in despair, reached in his kit and picked out another wrong one, and this time his pill came to rest near the fence, leaving him a semi-unplayable lie.

Kamensky just quints down the fairway, quints at Sam and hands him a stick with a decisive air that brooks no guesswork. He enabled Sam to break the Open record with that 67. On the eighteenth Snead hooked his drive into the rough near a tree, and any shot toward the green might have become snarled in the branches of that majestic maple. But with his usual nerve he started to line up the shot. Kamensky looked at him severely and handed him a deep iron. Sam took the hint. He played out safely into the fairway, then rifled a shot up near the pin and sank it for his four—whereas he might have been out there yet, beating that tree down to a bush.

Unless Samuel Jackson Snead begins to think for himself, and vote Kamensky, he's going to win this tournament. Thanks to a 22-year-old kid who couldn't shoot par with a rifle, even if maw held him.

True Call Wins Top Flight 'Cap

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., June 7.—The first running of the Top Flight Handicap, named after C. V. Whitney's great filly which became the world's money winning champion of her sex with earnings of $275,900, provided a stirring contest here this afternoon. Mrs. D. U. Kerr's True Call earned the $6,200 winner's portion of the purse by a length. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Piquet headed James Emery's much-traveled Dolly Val for the place, while the favored Red Eye was a fatigued fourth in the field of nine fillies and mares.

Stops Rally In 9th, Tying Run on Base

Travis, Returning After Layoff, Stars Afield and at Bat; Winners Outhit, 9-8

By Shirley Povich.

Post Staff Writer

In the shrill presence of 9,000 Ladies Day guests who vocalized for two tense hours, Dutch Leonard yesterday achieved his seventh victory of the season—a skimpy 3-2 job against the Chicago White Sox.

He outpitched Jack Knott to deliver the victory to the Nats, but the result was still very much in doubt as late as the ninth inning when the White Sox had the tying run on base. The big knuckle-baller escaped from that situation to the accompaniment of the feminine delegation's last triumphant scream.

A potent factor in the Nats' triumph was Cecil Travis, who came off the bench after a two-week session with an ugly spike wound to support Leonard with an important three-bagger and at least one magnificent contribution in the field.

Nats Outhit, 9 to 8

Actually, the White Sox outhit the Nats, 9 to 8, but Leonard was an ornery sort when there were runners on base. The Nats did not exactly annihilate Knott. Their first run spawned directly from a muff by Third Baseman Bob Kennedy, and their important third run crossed the plate in the eighth on a luck-anointed two-bagger by Gerald Walker.

Leonard was in trouble in all of the first four innings. He escaped damage in the first, when Travis muffed Kreevich's double-play grounder after Kennedy opened the game with a single to left, and in the second the Sox put two men on base. In the third Chicago muffed a bright scoring chance after getting runners on first and third with one out, the result of singles to right by the former Nats, Joe Kuhel and Taft Wright. But when they essayed a double steal, Travis' throw to the plate trapped Kuhel, and the upshot was that both runners ended up on third base, where Wright was tagged out.

In the fourth, Eric McNair started to make trouble for Leonard with a single to center and a rally appeared to be on in full cry when Tresh drove a hard shot over second base. But Travis somehow got to the ball, flipped it backward to Bloodworth, and it evolved as an exceedingly nifty double play.

Walker Sleeps

Back in the third inning, the Nats had taken a one-run lead, thanks very much to Johnny Welaj. Thanks very much to Gerry Walker in the second inning, they did not score, however. Walker singled to right and tried to take second when Wright momentarily fumbled the ball. Umpire Quinn called him safe when McNair dropped Wright's throw, but Walker unwittingly wandered off the bag and was tagged out again.

But in the third the Nats got a run home. Rick Ferrell singled to left and Leonard forced him in an attempt to sacrifice. Leonard moved to second when Kennedy fumbled Cawe's grounder, and to third when Lewis grounded to Kuhel. Welaj fetched him home with a single that Kennedy could only knock down with a desperate dive.

All of a sudden in the sixth, Leonard ran into trouble. Wright singled to left with one out, and Luke Appling scored him with a three-bagger that bounded against the rightfield boxes and eluded Case. In this emergency, Leonard caused Rosenthal to foul out to Lewis, and struck out McNair to get out of the inning very nicely.

The Nats broke the 1-1 tie in the St. Louis Fires Blades, Hires Southworth

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 7.—Ray Blades, hailed as one of the greatest tacticians of baseball last year, was fired outright today as manager of the faltering St. Louis Cardinals.

He was replaced by Billy Southworth, successful manager of the Rochester club of the International League, in a sudden shakeup aimed at getting the Redbirds back into the National League race.

Picked by the experts as almost a "cinch" pennant winner this season, the club has been a dismal failure and was only one game out of the cellar before today's game with the Giants.

Starts Monday

In making the announcement—not altogether unexpected — President Sam Breadon said Southworth would take charge of the team Monday. Meantime, Mige Gonzales, veteran Cardinal coach, will act as manager.

Estel Crabtree, veteran member of the Rochester team, which is leading the league by four and a half games, was named to succeed Southworth.

Both Southworth and Blades are graduates of the Cardinals' vast chain-store system and it will be Billy's second fling at piloting the Cards. He had his first chance in 1929, but was dropped back to

Chase vs. Dietrich As Nats-White Sox Resume Series

Ken Chase, who defeated Cleveland in this last start, will take the mound for the Nats today in the second game of the series with the White Sox. He will be bidding for his fifth victory of the season, and the Nats will be bidding for fifth place.

Chase's pitching opponent will be bespectacled Bill Dietrich, who once pitched a no-hit game. He has been effective for the White Sox this season.

The Nats lineup will be mildly shuffled today with Jake Early catching. The return of Cecil Travis has resulted in the rebenching of Rookie Jimmy Pofahl.

The Masters Miss 'Em, Too, in the National Open

The gallery around the eighteenth green heaved a sigh of disappointment during yesterday's National Open play at Cleveland as this 8-footer by Horton Smith evaded the cup by a fraction of an inch. If it had dropped, Smith would have paced the field by a stroke instead of being tied with Sam Snead and Lawson Little for the 36-hole lead with a 141

Reds Bow by 4-2 On Camilli's Blow; Walters Is Beaten

By International News Service

Cincinnati, June 7.—Brooklyn today took first place in the National League from Cincinnati by trimming the Reds, 4 to 2, in 11 innings and handing Bucky Walters his first defeat of the season after nine straight victories.

Dolph Camilli's homer with Ernie Koy on base and two out in the eleventh stretched the Dodger winning streak to six in a row and shattered the mastery Walters had displayed against Brooklyn over eight successive games through two seasons.

Harry Craft was restricted to a triple in the Reds' half of the ninth when his drive cleared the left-center wall but struck a piece of temporary fence used to shield the batters' eyes from a street lamp during night games. The umpires said the ball was in play and Craft got a triple and was stranded on third. This shield and another one were removed after the game.

Al McCoy Beats Bettina Before 2,577

Boston, June 7 (INS).—Al McCoy, 179½, Waterville, Me., tonight scored a split decision over Melio Bettina, 180½, Beacon, N. Y., former light heavyweight boxing champion, in a ten-round bout before 2,577 at Boston Garden to win a match with 175-pound champion Billy Conn.

Bob Feller Victim Of Champs' 2-Run Rally in Ninth

By the Associated Press

New York, June 7.—The World Champion Yankees first embarrassed and then defeated the fiery fastballer, Bob Feller, today, scoring two runs in the ninth inning to overtake the Cleveland Indians, 5 to 4.

The Yankees startled a big weekday crowd of 31,430, as well as the Indians, by stealing home against Feller in the second inning, and finally overwhelmed him with four singles in the fatal ninth.

The struggle was an exciting if erratic hurling duel matching Feller against Marvin Breuer and Bump Hadley, of the Yanks, with the latter pair holding the Indians to five hits.

Cleveland's first hit was Hal Trosky's fourteenth home run in the second inning and three of the visitors' other blows were crowded into the third inning for three runs.

Meantime, Feller had his fast ball working well and received spectacular support. After giving up three runs in the first two frames, he steadied to hold the champs to two hits and one run until the ninth.

Feller's fault today, however, was wobbliness with men on base. In the second inning he was caught flat-footed as George Selkirk, who had doubled and reached third on a fly, raced home while Feller went through his complicated windup.

Great Battle Seen In 36-Hole Finals Today; Demaret Among Failures

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A Staff Correspondent

Canterbury Golf Course, Cleveland, Ohio, June 7.—Another dead calm settled over Canterbury tonight, awaiting tomorrow's final 36 holes in the National Open championship when one of the greatest finishing fights in 44 years looms in this golf classic. Sammy Snead was 2 over par in a dizzy round and two stalwart shotmakers caught him, Lawson Little, making a major bid for the crown, and Horton Smith, who threatned to emerge undisputed leader but slipped on the last holes.

The famous wind blew today, but only for a few minutes. A brief afternoon storm spared Little, Ralph Guldahl, Frank Walsh, the day's sensations and others who started in the morning, but Snead, Craig Wood, Henry Picard and many more were handicapped for two or three holes.

Sixty-six players with two-round totals of 153 or better, qualified for the finals, but on the outside looking in was a cofavorite in the pre tourney ratings, Texan Jimmy Demaret, who picked up in disgust on the last nine, and was joined by Carolina's hope, Clayton Heafner. Former Champions Johnny Goodman and Olin Dutra continued their bogey barrage and were eliminated, along with Amateur Champion Bud Ward, sadly off his game; Slugger Jimmy Thomson and Harry Cooper, who lost his consistent touch.

Takes Only 29 Putts

Little, an early starter, went around in 29 putts, including a back nine of 33 and a no-putt green where he holed a sand iron shot. He added his 69 with his opening 72 for the first 141 total of the day. The former king of the world's amateurs, who won his first pro tournament in this country on the last winter circuit, led the Nation's qualifiers at Chicago last week.

Snead left the tee with a gallery of several thousand trailing, and they moaned as he went over par for the first time in the tournament on the third hole. Two more bogeys dotted his card on the out nine and he was 39, three over. Coming back he looked more like the first round leader. One, two and three birdie putts he dropped in six holes to catch par. Then he had a disastrous five on the par 3, seventeenth, where he was on in two out of the deep rough and then three-putted to finish with 74 and 141.

Smith was two under par playing the fifteenth, and could match regulation figures and take a two stroke lead. But the tough finishing holes caught him too. A sacrifice shot on the fifteenth out of the deep rough cost a stroke, and he missed a three-footer, on 17 for a par to drop into the three-way deadlock.

Walsh Scores a 142

A morning 69 by big, bush-haired, be-knickered Frank Walsh, of Rumson, N. J., placed him a shot behind the leaders as he dropped four short putts for birdies. His total is 142. Leading money winner Ben Hogan, well liked here, holed a 25-footer on the eighteenth, for a 73 and 143, a score matched by 135-champion Sam Parks, jr., who slipped to 74 after his initial 69.

Leading the even par totals, 144, three strokes back of the leaders and in fourth place, is the dangerous figure of Ralph Guldahl, who hit 17 greens but failed with his putter. The two-time champion, who knows this course well, is bracketed with Leonard Dodson, Kansas City, who paired par rounds, Dutch Harrison, who rallied with a 70 for 144 and Vic Ghezzi, N. J., who reversed Harrison's rounds of 74-70.

The old timers are first represented by Gene Sarazen, at 145 and in striking distance with Craig Wood, who slipped a little on the first nine, Jock Hutchison, jr.,

Remolee Wins Charles Town 5th; Jockey Murray Suspended

Rider Banned For Rest of Race Meeting

Stewards Charge He Caused Horse To Fall; Remolee Pays $10.60 Price

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 7.—Cutting the corners sharply coming into the stretch, J. E. Simmons' Remolee drove to victory under Jockey Sammy Palumbo's handling in the fifth race of a featureless Friday program.

Remolee, which had shown dull efforts on two recent occasions, was a length winner over H. O. Wilt's Tavern, ridden by Jockey Beverly Hacker. J. M. Trapnell's Mighty Busy was third in the limit field of eight operating at 6½ furlongs.

Remolee was lukewarm while the crowd placed most of its dependence upon Tavern with the result that the winner paid a $10.60 mutuel. Remolee was clocked in 1:22 2-5, creditable time over a slow track that was drying out during the afternoon.

Jockey J. Murray was suspended for the remainder of the meeting. The stewards' statement read: "J. Murray, jockey, suspended for the remainder of the meeting for coming over too sharply at first turn, causing Dear Gracie to fall in third race."

Murray had the mount on Tobias and the gelding bumped Dear Gracie. Palumbo, on Navigation, had gone up on the outside of Kin Mag. For a moment it appeared that Palumbo would go down. But Dear Gracie fell, throwing Jockey C. Payne to the ground. The rider was examined and said he was uninjured. He returned to the jockeys' room to await a mount in the seventh race.

Navigation and Palumbo went on to win in easy fashion after the accident. The Wave On gelding, a $3.20 favorite, downed, among others, Kin Mag and Bank Note.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANROCK, $16.40, $7.60, $4.00; VERITAS, $8.80, $4.00; RARE GEM, $2.60.

CANROCK, well up from start, responded to punishment entering stretch and drew clear at end. VERITAS, off alertly, took command on inside going to first turn, saved much ground, but could not stand winner's rush. RARE GEM, forwardly placed from a slow beginning, could not stay when the real test came. NATHAN HALE could not keep up. HAPPY HOST went evenly.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $500. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:36½. Off 5:39. Winner, R. D. Boyd's ch. m. (6), by Blind Play—Heartache. Trained by G. Pye. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:56⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HEART PLAY, $5.00, $3.00, $2.40; BRIGHT LIGHT, $3.80, $3.00; LACEY MISS, $4.60.

HEART PLAY, rated along while a close contender, came to outside of LACEY MISS when placed to drive and wore down latter to win going away. BRIGHT LIGHT, not hurried with in early running, worked way to contention after 6 furlongs, but bore out entering stretch. LACEY MISS saved ground while setting pace and weakened from her early efforts while under punishment. PLAYDEMA ran an even race. FOREIGN LEGION was outrun.

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

Racing Secretary and Track Handicapper Freddie Burton is confined to his hotel with an attack of influenza. He is getting along O. K. Burton turned in a masterpiece of handicapping here last Wednesday when he picked the entire field in the handicap in the order in which the horses finished. In other words, the horses graduated from the highest weight to the lowest in the order that they reached the wire. Today's handicap has all the earmarks of a good race. Some of the best seven furlong horses on the grounds are in the line-up. Consistent, Strumming and Vendor's Lien are expected to draw the bulk of the play. Limit fields have been named for the other seven events and the secretary's office tossed in two substitute races to take care of emergencies. Jockey Carson Kirk is getting the feel of the track. He was tossed by his mount in Thursday's last race and the next time out, in today's first event, he fell with Danzig. Kirk was unhurt. Jockey Pat Grant lost his apprentice allowance with his victory in yesterday's second race. Jockey Beverley Hacker's mother and his sister, 10-year-old Grace Bruce, are visiting him during the meeting here. I'm glad I don't have to put in as many hours as Track Superintendent Henry Erickson. Furthermore, I couldn't ride that harrow if I had to although the additional weight probably would help. Jimmy Wallace, racing's original thin man, has picked up seven pounds since the meeting began and blames Ma Jenkins' cooking. The jockeys and horsemen who shack it along the nearby Shenandoah River are swimming again and the water is fine. Trainer E. W. Cook carries off male bathing beauty honors. Seeing a favorite quoted at 3-5 the press box wisecracker, "I thought Man o' War was in Kentucky." See you on the rail. BILL

First race—Wayout on general good form, appears best suited of those collected for this abbreviated sprint. I see no reason for mistakes. Chide has plenty of early speed, and should be prominent in this type of race. Chief Cherokee flashed enough last out to be a threat.

Second race—Notoriety is the speed of this party. Needs only the right ride Chusand belongs with this kind and is dangerous. Small Chance is fit now and could be better than I'm rating him.

Third race—Ace of Trumps won a somewhat similar test from the inside post position. C. Kirk will do the booting and I'm going to string along. Can Bloom stumbled leaving the gate in a race here and is a threat. Bubbleworth is honest and deserves consideration.

Fourth race—Autumn Echo won and then turned in a dull effort. This is another day and I look for better things. Margie Wrack has been falling often, but will be prominent here. Custer and Wise Money are possibilities.

Fifth race—Strumming takes off weight for this and is as fit as hands make horses. Lacks some of the class of the others but I'm going to take my chances. Consistent has done about everything asked and is dangerous. Vendor's Lien for the minor award.

Sixth race—I'm going to give Wahoo another chance. Just can't forget those New England races Sandy Belie is good now and looms as the one to beat. Allen Caid lacked racing room last out and could awaken.

Seventh race—Judge's Bid showed enough in that recent test to indicate that he is not far from the winner's circle. I'm going to take my chances. Extra Good and The Knife, the last named a brisk worker

Bimelech and Gallahadion Battle Again in Belmont Today

30,000 Fans Expected to Witness Race

Bradley's Charge To Be Favorite In Field of Seven If Track Is Fast

By the Associated Press

New York, June 7.—The battle for the 3-year-old turf championship comes down to Belmont Park's mile and one-half course tomorrow with E. R. Bradley's Bimelech and Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Gallahadion heading a field of seven in the seventy-second running of the $25,000 added Belmont Stakes.

If the weather remains fair and the track as fast as today, Bimelech figures to parade postward the choice of an expected crowd of between 30,000 and 35,000. The Bradley colt has not lived up to preseason expectations but he has shown he can run over a pasteboard track.

Avenged Derby Loss

After finishing second back of Gallahadion in the Kentucky Derby, he came back to whip Mrs. Mars' horse in the Preakness and then trailed far back in the Withers Mile at Belmont, which was won by Mrs. Payne Whitney's Corydon, a rank outsider. His jockey, F. A. Smith, blamed both defeats on the cuppy condition of the tracks.

Corydon has been entered in tomorrow's race but this time he'll not be neglected in the wagering. The Greentree colt showed by coming from behind in the stretch that the mile and one-half of the Belmont should be to his liking. He'll have the improved Century Note as a running mate.

Since running third in the Preakness, Gallahadion has been working well. His race in the Derby indicated he, too, likes plenty of distance. Belmont's long stretches and wide turns should give him plenty of room to use his ground-eating strides without interference.

Completing the well-balanced field are, George D. Widener's Your Chance, a speed demon that has showed plenty of improving since trailing in the Preakness; the Millsdale Stable's Andy K., a decided factor if he forgets to run out, and Mrs. N. C. Phipps' Snow Ridge, kept on the sidelines since early season by the coughing epidemic that invaded Trainer "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons' barns.

If all seven start, the race will have an estimated value of $47,680, not as rich as either the Derby or Preakness but a race that should help clear up the muddled 3-year-old division. Post time is about 3:45 p. m. (E. S. T.).

Navy Elects Sports Heads For Next Year

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., June 7.—Captains and managers of seven spring athletic teams at the Naval Academy for next season were elected today before the midshipmen embarked on a squadron of three battleships for the annual summer practice cruise. Leaders of the crews will not be named until after the Poughkeepsie regatta, June 18, in which the varsity and junior varsity eights will compete.

Departing from a long-standing custom, the Middies named cocaptains of the baseball team. They are Shortstop Tommy E. Blount, Rye, N. Y., and Pitcher Howard R. (Lefty) Schoenbaum, Huntington, W. Va. They succeed Robert R. Wooding, Philadelphia, first baseman who played little during the late season, because of trouble with his eyes. R. C. Glenn, of Manhattan, Kans., will be team manager.

The field and track men rewarded Lloyd L. De Latour, of New Orleans, La., who hung up a new Academy record for the half mile in the meet with Army last Saturday when he defeated his brother, Frank De Latour, captain of the West Point team. J. E. Hokr, of Kanapolis, Kans., will manage the squad.

Bleecker P. Seaman, jr., of Garden City, N. Y., who played a defense position on the lacrosse team, is the new leader of the stickmen, with F. Costagliola, Providence, R. I., manager.

The other captains and managers, respectively, are:

Tennis—Russell Blair, Memphis, Tenn.; F. O. Blair, Long Beach, Calif.

Rifle—Robert M. Strieter, Rock Island, N. Y.; Joseph K. Taussig, jr., Norfolk, Va.

Golf—Robert C. Knight, class of 1942, Baltimore, Md.; R. L. Schreier, Buffalo, N. Y. None of the new first classmen won a varsity N. in this sport, so a second classman was chosen as leader.

Sailing—William E. Lemos, Riverside, N. Y.; W. V. Downer, jr., Chicago, Ill. Lemos will be unable to compete in the thirteenth MacMillan Cup Regatta for knockabouts to be held at Barnesgat Bay, N. J., June 26 to 28, as he embarked today with the rest of the seniors for the practice cruise.

Printers Defeat FBI Nine, 5 to 4

F. B. I. nine staged a 3-run rally to tie the count in the last inning of its United States Government League game with the Union Printers yesterday, but another Printer run a few minutes later won the game, 5-4.

Pitcher Gardiner, who had limited the G-Men to two safeties, opened the seventh and last inning with a triple. Opposing Pitcher De Bettencourt decided to walk Holloran and Mosedale, filling the bases, and then a long fly by Shortstop Boundford sent Gardiner home with the winning run.

Bill McDowell Signs to Meet Cocoa Kid Here

Dallas Welterweight To Meet Puerto Rican At Stadium June 17

Wild Bill McDowell, Dallas, Tex., who has won five straight matches here, including two from Phil Ruhr, yesterday signed to meet the Cocoa Kid, Puerto Rican colored star, Monday night, June 17, at Griffith Stadium.

The Cocoa Kid is undefeated in his last 40 straight fights, and is ranked as the No. 1 welterweight challenger by the National Boxing Association and Ring Magazine.

Bill Daley, manager of McDowell, came to terms with Matchmaker Gabe Menendez after two days of dickering during which Menendez had many anxious moments. For a while it appeared that New Haven, Cocoa Kid's home town, would grab the bout, but Daley elected to fight in the District.

Furr, recent conqueror of Steve Mamakos, was slated to fight Cocoa Kid, but demanded too high a guarantee—and then decided he wanted to meet Armstrong and no one else.

Know Your Dogs— No. 87 of a Series

By George Berner

THE BEAGLE

This sad-eyed, merry little hound has absolutely no peer as a rabbit hunter and his bell-like singing when on-trial is really something worth listening to. His origin is lost somewhere in the ages but he is certainly one of the oldest of all breeds. He is most affectionate, very intelligent and makes the best of pets and companions as well as a hunter. He may be any true hound color and should not be more than 15 inches at the shoulder. This beautiful speciman is owned by Dr. Ernest Butz, 711 East Capitol street.

Detroit Beats Bosox to Near First Place

Newhouser Hurls 7-1 Victory; Team But 2 Games From Top

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 7.—Hal Newhouser, Detroit's native son southpaw, moved the Tigers to within two games of the American League's top place today by holding the Red Sox to seven hits for a 7-1 victory.

With the Yankees beating Bob Feller and the Cleveland Indians, the setback did not affect the Red Sox's fingernail hold on first place. Joe Cronin's sluggers were held scoreless until the ninth. The Tigers clinched the game against Starter Bill Butland with a three-run rally in the fifth.

Butland gave the Tigers five hits, four passes and five runs before retiring in favor of Charley Wagner, who performed effectively after a wobbly start in the sixth, when the visitors completed their scoring.

The Tigers' big fifth was the result of two passes, Charlie Gehringer's triple and Hank Greenberg's single.

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 7.—Al Brancato, rookie third baseman, drove in all the Athletics' runs today as Philadelphia defeated St. Louis, 3-2, behind the six-hit pitching of Nelson Potter.

In four trips to the plate, Brancato got a triple, double and single, his safety in the ninth scoring Dick Siebert with the winning tally. Siebert had singled, was sacrificed and then stole third.

Johnny Bernardino homered in the fourth with one on to account for the two St. Louis runs. Vernon Kennedy yielded nine hits and was supported by four double plays.

The Browns filled the bases with two out in the ninth, but Kennedy grounded to Benny McCoy.

6 Doubles, 3 Triples Roll Off Bucs' Bats; Van Robays Is Star

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 7.—The Pittsburgh Pirates today smothered the Philadelphia Phillies under a deluge of 18 hits, including six doubles and three triples, to win, 10 to 4, for their third consecutive victory.

Rookie Outfielder Maurice Van Robays paced the Pirate batting spree with four safe blows, including two singles, a double and a triple, and Shortstop Arky Vaughan contributed three two-baggers. Outfielder Joseph Marty homered for the Quaker City team in the second, with the bases empty.

Walter Beck started on the mound for the Phils, but was driven to the showers in the third, when Si Johnson relieved him and held the Pirates to four hits until he retired at the end of the sixth. Clyde Smoll was clipped for seven safeties in the seventh and eighth innings.

Cards Hang on to Beat N. Y. Giants by 3-2

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 7.—In their first game following the release of Manager Ray Blades the St. Louis Cardinals edged out the New York Giants, 3 to 2, today for unlucky Hal Schumacher's sixth defeat.

Although the St. Louis sluggers were held to six hits, they put together four of them with a walk for all their runs in the first inning.

After that the Cardinals proceeded to make five double plays, one short of the major league record, to keep the Giants in check although the New Yorkers got ten hits off Lon Warneke and Curt Davis. Three of these hits and two walks accounted for the Giants' runs in the seventh. They have made only a total of six for Schumacher in the six games he has lost.

Cubs Take 4th Straight, 5-3, Over Boston Bees

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 7.—Jimmy Gleeson's single and doubles by Billy Herman and Bob Collins broke up a 3-3 tie in the eighth inning and gave Chicago's Cubs a 5-to-3 decision over the Boston Bees. It was the Cubs' fourth victory in a row.

Dick Coffman relieved Dick Errickson at the start of the inning and was charged with the defeat. Claude Passeau went the route for the Cubs, allowing eight hits in achieving his fourth triumph against six setbacks.

Outfielder Billy Nicholson's third home run in two days, with Phil Cavaretta on base, gave Chicago a 2-1 lead in the sixth, but two errors by Shortstop Bobby Mattick helped Boston tie the score in the seventh. After Dominic D'Alessandro's triple put the Cubs ahead again in their half, Chet Ross' homer once more evened the count. The Cubs then settled the issue at Coffman's expense.

Record 78 Wins for Mrs. Meckley

Net Honors Captured by Mrs. Miller

2 D. C. Women Steal M.S.G.A. Field Day Show From Hosts at Rolling Road Club

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, June 7.—Mrs. Betty Meckley, long-hitting Washingtonian, equaled the 78 course record of the Rolling Road Golf Club to win the low gross honors in the Maryland State Golf Association field day for women yesterday.

Washingtonians took two of the 18 prizes and Baltimoreans the rest. Mrs. Meckley's fine card was only three strokes over men's par. Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, of Baltimore, who did not compete today, made the record last year. She and Mrs. Meckley held the former mark of 80 established in 1938.

Net to Mrs. Miller

Mrs. Edith V. Miller, also of the District of Columbia, took first low net by winning the draw from two other contestants all of whom tied with 76 nets. Mrs. Miller's card was 95-19—76. On the draw, Mrs. George W. Rice came second with 96-20—76 and Mrs. Alexander Gordon 3d, was next with 86-10—76. The last two named are Baltimoreans.

Mrs. Miller did not notice until after her score was recorded officially on the board that the seven given her on the thirteenth should have been a six. She would have won first low net if she had caught the error on her score card before it had been written up.

Baltimoreans Score

Leading in class B was Mrs. J. George Johnson, of Baltimore, with 49-51—100 gross. The first net was captured by a Terra Mariae Country Clubmate, Mrs. T. E. Bever with 103-24—79. Second net was the 108-26—82 score made by Mrs. Ebbie Love, of Baltimore.

Mrs. George Goetzman, of Washington, had the fewest putts with 28 but because she received a net prize, she could not have two. Mrs. Meckley putted the next lowest number of times with 29.

Mrs. Harper Martin, Mrs. Allen in Finals

By the Associated Press

Old Point Comfort, Va., June 7.—Mrs. Lily Harper Martin, slender, brown-haired Portsmouth player who has won five State golf championships in the past six years, will meet Mrs. H. N. Allen, experienced Newport News competitor, in the 18-hole finals of the nineteenth annual Virginia women's tournament here tomorrow.

The attractive 24-year-old title-holder advanced to the finals today with a 4 and 3 decision over Mrs. Grayson Dashiell, of Richmond. Previously she had eliminated Mrs. Lillian Foster, of Hampton, and Mrs. R. C. Hockaday, of Newport News, both by convincing 8 and 7 margins.

Mrs. Allen won 2 up from Mrs. Helen P. Wise, of Langley Field, in the semifinals. In the other preliminary rounds, Mrs. Allen ousted Mrs. Fred Evans, Langley Field, 5 and 4, and Mrs. J. C. Addington, Norfolk, 3 and 2.

Tomorrow's finals will write another chapter to a rivalry begun back in 1936 on the James River Country Club course in Newport News when Mrs. Martin downed Mrs. Allen for the State championship, 3 and 2.

The Allen-Wise set-to was a thriller which saw the two rivals all even at the turn with 40 cards each. Mrs. Allen took the third with a par 3 and the eighth with a birdie 3. Mrs. Wise won the fifth with a par 4 and the short seventh with a 3.

Russell Motors Beat Reliance In Post League

Score 12-4 Victory After Having Lost Six Straight Games

After six straight losses and a tie in The Washington Post Industrial League, Russell Motors finally got into the victory column yesterday when it jumped into a 9-4 lead in the first three innings and coasted to a 12-4 judgment over Reliance Life.

It was the Insurance nine's third straight loss after entering league play late.

Seidel and Clements combined for Russell's opening victory, between them allowing five safeties and issuing six bases on balls. Fourteen blows, including Forney's triple in the sixth with a mate on base, were registered by the vindictive Motormen.

Gibson Has 146

Baltimore's Andy Gibson, whose first round 71 gained the little Scot respect among the big boys, was 75 with a ball out of bounds, a two-stroke penalty. Gibson was out in 37 and back in 38 with a birdie on 15 for 75 and a 146 total. He had lots of company, P. G. A. Champion Henry Picard, who can't seem to get hot but who sticks in there with two 73's. Jim Foulis, Harold McSpaden, Leland Gibson, Kansas City, Defending Champion Byron Nelson, who was 36-36 the first day and 37-37 today, and Eddie Oliver a 69 shooter Thursday and a 77 man today. A big six on the sixth, where a tree and the deep rough caught him, started Big Eddie, of Hornel, N. Y., and well known in Washington, on the down grade.

The 147s include famous names, but previous opens have proven that six shots back entering the final day is too many. Australian Amateur Jim Ferrier, only survivor among the foreigners, is 147, with Dapper Dick Metz, Scrambler Johnny Revolta, former Champion Tommy Armour, Jimmy Hines, Matt Kowal and Al Brosch. Ed Dudley is 148; Toney Manero, 150; Walter Hagan, 152, and Paul Runyan among the 153s, too far out.

Local Players Fail to Qualify For Open Finals

Gibson, of Baltimore, Cards 146, However, To Stay in Running

A Staff Correspondent

Canterbury Golf Course, Cleveland, June 7.—The Washingtonians changed from players to spectators today as they were all well over the qualifying limit in the National Open. Gene Larkin added another 78 for a 156 total, Lewis Worsham went to 81 for 159, while George Diffenbaugh started in the sudden shower and picked up on the third hole when he couldn't hold the club.

Larkin, who had driver trouble on the first nine yesterday, was hitting them down the middle today, but his second shots were continually finding the rough over the green and he just couldn't seem to get down in two more. He was out in 41 and then played the first seven holes of the back nine in 1 under par before he finished with bogeys for a 37 and 78. Gene dropped birdies on the par fives, 13 and 16, approaching within a few feet of the pin and holing the putts.

Worsham started very badly for the second straight day. He needed a 74 or better to make the low 60 and when he went 5 over par on the first four holes that was enough. He three-putted four greens, was in the deep rough three times and caught several traps in his second round of 41, 40—81.

Diffenbaugh, who couldn't afford to lose any shots to par after his opening 80, started in the rain, was 3 over par for three holes and when his club slipped on the fourth hole and narrowly missed a spectator he didn't hole out.

Batting stars of the day were Brooks for the winners and Harding for G. A. O. Both had three singles.

Pawnees Bow In Roller Derby

Severely handicapped by the absence of Bernice Abar, captain of the Washington girls, the Pawnees last night were outclassed by the Chicago Aztecs in their Roller Derby game before 4,000 spectators at Riverside Stadium, 14 to 9.

The plucky bar injured several ribs in a fall last Thursday. After last night's game, however, she insisted she would be back on the job tonight when the rival continue their series at 8:15 o'clock.

Last night's victory sent Chicago into a 10-to-8 game lead for the series.

Two Chicago skaters, blonde Alicia Gadias and broad-shouldered Steve Irwin, paved the way to Chicago's victory. Gadias scored three times in the first period and Irwin two points in each open house.

Arlington Girl Aces Rout M. P. M. Market

Arlington Aces girls team launched its Metropolitan Softball League season last night at Ballston Stadium with a 14-12 trimming of M. P. M. Market girls. Grace Torreyson delivered the winning blow in the sixth inning when she homered with the bases loaded.

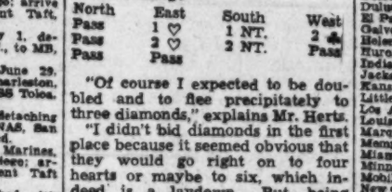
Contract Bridge

Frank B. Lord, Washington bridge expert, says the present record for endurance and skill is held by John Donnelly, who recently played in eight successive Washington duplicate games with eight different partners and won eight top scores.

No trump probably affords more opportunity for strategy and psychics than any other declaration.

"This is an old dodge but it worked out so admirably in this instance at the Cavendish Club that I thought you might relish it," writes B. Russell Herts, decorator and bridge player.

The cards, with both sides vulnerable and North dealer:



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♡	1 NT.	2 ♣
Pass	2 ♡	2 NT.	Pass
Pass	Pass

"Of course I expected to be doubled and to flee precipitately to three diamonds," explains Mr. Herts.

"I didn't bid diamonds in the first place because it seemed obvious that they would go right on to four hearts or maybe to six, which indeed is a laydown. But, being timorous souls, they just passed!

"The opening lead of the club queen was overtaken by the king and a club returned. After taking five club tricks, West hesitated (to my horror) and then played a heart. By this time I had discarded five black cards and there was nothing left to do but to take the ace of hearts and seven diamonds for two no trump."

Capital Trade Best Since '29, Bankers Told

New Highs Being Set, Committee Reports At Va. Session

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hot Springs, Va., June 7.—Washington trade during 1939 was reported as having shown the sharpest recovery since 1929, and conditions in the District of Columbia are continuing to show, in the opening 1940 months, substantial gains over a year ago, the District Bankers Association's annual convention here was told today.

The report on business conditions was given by Barnum L. Colton, chairman of the committee on commercial trade activities, and vice president of the National Savings & Trust Co. of Washington.

Jo V. Morgan, member of the District Board of Tax Appeals, speaking on "The Tax Situation in the District of Columbia," observed that every effort should be made to prevent the increase of the rate of real estate tax.

Increase Opposed

"An increase in such rates would injure every element of our community," he stated. Groups that would be affected he named as businessman, banker, lawyer, Government employe, laborer and all home owners and tenants. "Against such increase the Commissioners of the District have given their best efforts, and have taken every step to avoid the necessity of adding that burden to the backs of the residents of the District. Let us hope that such will not be necessary," he said.

There is a strong sentiment in Congress for the increase of the real estate tax rate, Morgan stated. This is expressed frequently, he said.

"Something should be done about the valuation or assessment of property which every well informed person knows is of a higher proportion or percentage of value than in any other jurisdiction—in many instances as high as 125 percent—which seems to be ignored by members of Congress who only consider the rate of $1.75 in comparison with the rates in their own jurisdiction, where the property, however, is valued or assessed, in some instances, as low as 40 per cent of its value," he said.

Bright Spots Noted

The Committee on Trade Activities reported that the District has 40 telephones per 100 of population —highest average in the world. A breakdown of the electric consumers totals reveals large increases, it was added. The Capital Transit Co. and the Washington-Virginia-Maryland Coach Co., "reported new records in the first quarter." Tourists visiting Washington so far in 1940 "have shown substantial gains over a year ago," it was reported. The major air lines serving Washington report new high marks in number of passengers handled. "Department store sales volume advanced to new records—estimated sales 7 per cent ahead of a year ago and far above 1929 levels," it was announced.

The Washington Real Estate Board apartment house vacancy survey shows the 1939 vacancy average to be 7.29 per cent, whereas the average vacancies for the months of January, February, March, April and May of this year is 6.15 per cent, it was stated by the committee.

A. B. A. Officer Speaks

Walter B. French, deputy manager in charge of the consumer credit department of the American Bankers Association, told the bankers that the consumer credit offered an opportunity for an important contribution to "the most democratic banking system in the world."

He described the development of small loan departments in banks during the past six years and added:

"If our approach to the business is purely selfish and temporary, if we go into the consumer credit field for whatever relief it may offer for immediate investment problems, than we are headed for trouble. If, on the other hand, we develop our consumer credit departments with the basic thought of supplying a credit service to a large percentage of the population who never knew bankers in this relationship before, if we give credit only to people who are entitled to credit, used for constructive purposes, then, gentlemen, we will not only do a good job for the individual borrower and society as a whole, but we will make a further important contribution to the most democratic banking system in the world."

A. M. McLachlen, first vice president of the bankers' group, presided at the second session of the meeting at the Homestead Hotel.

The convention, which opened Thursday, continues through tomorrow. Dr. William Yandell Elliott, chairman, department of government, Harvard University, will speak on "The Economic Aspects of America with World War Conditions and the Aftermath." Officers will be elected and installed.

W. Va. Bankers Hear Pope

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., June 7 (AP).—Allan M. Pope, former president of the Investment Bankers Association, declared today "more than ample private funds" exist to finance factory expansion for defense needs.

Use of vast public funds to purchase or control manufacturing plants, he said, would be a "sixth column" threat to free enterprise.

Pope, a former Army officer who became a business man after the World War, now president of the First of Boston Corp., with headquarters in New York, turned to the financing aspects of the defense program in a speech prepared for delivery before West Virginia Bankers Association.

New York, June 7 (AP).—Brewster Aeronautical Corporation announced today signing of an order for $26,582,000 consisting of fighting planes and dive bombers for export.

It was understood the order was divided between the French government and the Netherlands East Indies.

Reports of the spread of smut in soft winter wheat, strength in securities and development of weather in the Southwest believed to be more favorable for black rust also encouraged buyers. Some purchasing was attributed to Northwestern flour interests.

Securities Buoyant in Face of Contradictory War News; Canadian and Australian Bonds Gain Smartly on Further Rise in Sterling

New York, June 7.—Financial markets were remarkably steady in the face of new indications that Italy is preparing to join the European melee. News from the front was contradictory, but traders apparently interpreted the early developments of the latest battle as not unfavorable to the Allies. At any rate share prices gained steadily in a quiet and orderly market, with final quotations around the day's best levels.

Gyrations in sterling exchange again provided a lively feature. The pound moved within a range of 50 cents and closed at $3.81, up 11 cents. The official decree, which the market has been striving to discount, will be issued in London tomorrow. As of tonight there was little positive indication here as to what steps would be taken whether the free sterling market is to be dried up entirely or if it will remain in restricted form.

Vital Buying Need

It can be assumed, of course, that the British plan is to increase dollar value of the pound, in view of the vital need of obtaining war materials here, and that sale of sterling by foreigners will now be so regulated that the resultant dollar exchange can be used for British government account. Speculative covering in advance of the publication of the decree is naturally a factor in the sharp bulge in pound rates, amounting to about 62 cents since Thursday morning.

Canadian and Australian bonds reflected happenings in the foreign exchange market by recording good advances. Belgian liens were a bit improved and treasuries were firm.

Packard Auto headed the list for the third successive day, but showed a small loss. Steel common, Republic and Bethlehem were all popular and up for the day. Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey's advance, started early in the week, slowed down. International Nickel made a further recovery, and a number of the airplane issues were active at higher prices. United Air Lines was a feature with a net rise of 1¼, while North American Aviation was ahead ⅝.

Rails, Utilities Rise

Railroad "utility and merchandising descriptions joined the upswing and motors attracted support after publication of Ward's estimate of 95,500 cars and trucks assembled during the week, compared with 60,980 in the Memorial Day period and 65,265 units a year ago.

Gains of 1 to 2 points were numerous, including such stocks as Texas Corporation, Allied Chemical, Commonwealth & Southern preferred, Loew's, Sears Roebuck, Westinghouse Electric, Douglas Aircraft, Hercules Powder, Ingersoll Rand, Monsanto Chemical, National Steel and Norfolk & Western. Publication of the Philip Morris earnings report, showing a new high for the fiscal year ended March 31, was followed by a 3-point rise in the shares on a few sales.

A few weak spots included U. S. Gypsum, which went to a new low. Minor losses occurred in American Can, Interchemical Corporation, General Electric and Du Pont.

Wall Street continued to emphasize that for the time being the fighting in France takes precedence over home defense, third term, fifth-column mop-up in the United States or any other development. The average trader is of the opinion that if the news over the next few days points to ability of the Allies to stop the Nazi drive, it will breed a better sentiment that, in turn, should be reflected in a more active and stronger market.

Majority Show Gains

The composite average of the 100 key stocks was 0.45-point higher at the close with sales for the day 469,410 shares. A satisfactory point was that more than four times the number of shares traded showed gains than those which closed in lower ground.

Listed bonds displayed a good tone today, save for a few foreign dollar securities, but the volume of trading failed to improve. Turnover amounted only to $3,800,000, which is only one-third of what might be regarded as normal. Investment issues were firm, and most speculative bonds of domestic origin were marked lower. In the foreign section most bonds continued to drift lower.

United States Treasury securities were marked upward by small fractions in the formal trading, which chiefly reflected late strength the previous day in counter dealings. Highest grade corporate bonds were sufficiently firm to make probable a resumption next week of new issues business.

Reich Bonds Dip

German bonds dipped and French 7s fell 6 points. Danish and Norwegian bonds lost ground, but Belgians gained 1 to 3 points. The Canadian and Australian groups finally developed some strength, probably because of the advance of the free sterling rate. Italian and Japanese bonds were slightly better, while Latin Americans remained soft.

Among speculative rail gains of a point or two were common, Boston & Maine bonds were especially active, owing to approval of the debt settlement plan. Holding company and convertible bonds showed little change. Local tractions were dull and firm, while other special groups were neglected.

Banks Lend $941,041 for Home Fixing

2,132 Loans Made Since June, 1939, By Capital Banks

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Local banks during the period between June, 1939, date of the amended National Housing Act, and April 30, 1940, made 2,132 Title I modernization loans, amounting to $941,041 in value. Title II mortgage insurance loans made by Washington banks from date of the original act in 1934, up to March 31, 1940, totaled 1,565 with a valuation of $10,459,570.

Indications of increasing interstate flow of home mortgage funds are also shown in an analysis of distribution of local and out-of-State lending under the Federal Housing Administration's insured mortgage system last year.

Wide variation marked outflow and inflow of insured mortgage funds last year for individual States. Among those with institutions advancing a large proportion of their insured funds on out-of-State properties last year were Vermont with 78.7 per cent of the amount of all insured mortgages originated by its local institutions covering out-of-State properties; Minnesota, with 78 per cent; District of Columbia, 71.9; Delaware, 66.5; New Jersey, 39.6, and Kentucky, 34.8.

A member of the Federal Home Loan Bank System, District of Columbia Building and Loan and United States Savings and Loan Leagues, the association is the oldest of its kind in Washington. It opened for business in 1861, and has enjoyed a steady and consistent growth.

Accounting Explained

Questions which the public has been asking about the profession and practice of accountancy are answered in "Accounting and Your Pocketbook," a special reference pamphlet which District of Columbia Institute of Certified Public Accountants is distributing, it is announced by Harold C. Anderson, president of the institute.

Prepared by a special committee of the national institute, professional society of certified public accountants, in cooperation with various State societies, the new pamphlet presents facts about accountancy in nontechnical language.

It points out the difference between accounting and auditing; explains the auditor's report or "certificate" which accompanies financial statements, and stresses importance of opinion and judgment in the work of the certified public accountant.

President Anderson said the publication is being distributed throughout htis area to individuals and groups, including trade associations, chambers of commerce, bankers, attorneys, credit men, teachers, business executives, merchants, State and local government officials, civic groups, students, service clubs and others.

Bond Interest Declared

Directors of Washington Properties, Inc., declared interest for the six months' fiscal period ended April 30 at the rate of 2.5 per cent on the general mortgage income bonds. Interest checks will be mailed on August 1 to bondholders of record at the close of business July 19, according to Humphrey Lloyd, secretary.

Chicago, June 7.—Resignaiton of Lenox R. Lohr as president of the National Broadcasting Co. to become President of the Museum of Science & Industry, Chicago, was announced today by Col. A. A. Sprague.

Sprague has been acting president of the Industrial Museum in Jackson Park since the death of Rufus Cutler Dawes on January 8. Lohr is expected to assume his new post about July 15.

Lohr accepted the presidency, Sprague said, because of his "devotion to Rufus Dawes" and is giving up a highly remunerative position at a "great financial sacrifice to himself."

Lohr, general manager of the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition, was associated closely with Dawes, its president.

Sprague said no other man had been considered for the museum presidency and that the institution's trustees believed Lohr's experience and success with the 1933-34 World Fair displayed "the imagination and ability to carry this wonderful museum on to a successful life."

Lohr was born in Washington, D. C., in 1891, and was graduated from Cornell University in 1916 and has had broad military and scientific training. He served overseas as a major of engineering with the A. E. F.

Lohr became president of National Broadcasting Co. January 1, 1936, succeeding M. H. Aylesworth.

Heavy Selling Reduces Gains In Cotton List

At the close the list still was up 1 to 8 points.

Drastic British regulation of the pound seemed to have little immediate effect on the market, but it was commented that straddle operations would be retarded, if not eliminated, and that the ruling might act to broaden demand for American products.

Big Board President Injured at Tennis

New York, June 7 (AP).—Thirty-three-year-old William McChesney Martin, jr., president of the New York Stock Exchange, is going about with his arm in a sling, the result of an elbow injury received while practicing tennis at the River Club last Monday night.

Intimates said Martin slipped and fell while returning a difficult shot, striking his left elbow on the hard court. The little bone at the hinge of the elbow was chipped, they said.

Standard Power Breakup Hearing Scheduled July 8

The Securities Commission yesterday instituted an action against Standard Power & Light Corporation to determine whether it should be eliminated as a separate corporation in the billion dollar utilities system which it heads. Hearing was set for July 8.

The action was begun under a section of the utility holding company act which concerns corporate simplification of holding company systems. Proceedings toward geographical integration of the Standard Power system were begun earlier in the year.

The commission's order yesterday said that there were more than three tiers of companies in the sytem and that continuance of Standard Power & Light Corporation "unduly and unnecessarily complicates the structure" of the system and "unfairly and inequitably distributes voting power among security holders."

The North American Co. asked the Securities Commission today to hold in abeyance a hearing ordered under the so-called "death sentence" of the Public Utility Holding Company Act, but the motion was denied immediately and the case was adjourned to June 21.

Listen! with Slocum

Network notes—Laryngitis felled Penny Singleton, star of the C. B. S. "Blondie" series, last week but she recovered in time for her June 3 broadcast . . . Jean ("Dr. Christian") Hersholt and David Broekman, maestro of the "Texaco Star Theater," are worried over the fate of relatives abroad. Hersholt's mother and sister are in Denmark, while Broekman's mother and sister were in The Hague when the German invasion began . . . While her husband, Jack Bordeaux, fills a singing engagement in Panama, Peg Hillias, of Columbia's "Bachelor's Children" and "Caroline's Golden Store," has sub-let her apartment and moved in with Ginger Jones, another C. B. S. actress . . . When the scheduled "armchair detectives" failed to appear for an "Adventures of Ellery Queen" broadcast on C. B. S., Cynthia Carlon, an actress, and Arthur O'Connor, business man, were hurriedly pressed into service. Miss Carlon guessed the identity of the murderer, admitting, however, her choice was based on feminine intuition . . . There's truth as well as gagging in the cracks Kate Smith makes to her manager, Ted Collins, on her C. B. S. air show. Ted has a weakness for sweets and Mrs. Collins enlists Kate's aid in trying to keep him from eating too many . . . So lagging experts may have a chance to improve their score in the final minutes of C. B. S.'s "Fun In Print," Sigmund Spaeth's literary quiz session will be turned into a free-for-all, with credit going to the first contestant answering correctly . . . To the cast of Columbia's "Bachelor's Children" have been added Jane Gilbert as "Kathleen Carney" and Herb Butterfield as "Mr. Broderick" . . . In addition to her dramatic talents, as displayed in Wayne King's Saturday night C. B. S. show, Mary Patton is a skilled toe dancer, an art she learned as an ingenue with the road company of "You Can't Take It With You."

"Orphans in Love"

By Marion White

Ellen Carlan has loved Peter Storm since both were children. They take refuge from a storm in the deserted Tucker mansion and note the resemblance of Peter to Jonathan Tucker. John Abbott fears his deception 25 years ago when he abandoned the only heir at the orphanage, will be discovered and offers Peter a job in his firm. Mother Rosa at the orphanage sends Ellen to Rosalind, a famous designer who hires her as a model. The Abbotts decide Peter and Millicent would be a good match. Ellen models a bridal gown at Rosalind's fall show, which Roger Maillard attends with his sister. He falls in love with Ellen. Ellen gets her chance at dressmaking when a maid spills ink on a bridal gown and she makes a substitute dress. It is accepted and Rosalind promotes Ellen to designer. On Christmas, Peter and Ellen return to the orphanage with gifts, then he shows Ellen the Tucker house, cleaned and decorated for the occasion. Ellen finds a letter from Paris dated 1913 in a Bible and thrusts it in her pocket when Millicent arrives unexpectedly. Peter goes home with Millicent.

Chapter 33

BACK AT ST PETER'S, in the quiet sitting room of the sisters, Ellen sat alone with Mother Rosa. She wore the jacket of her suit because the room was chilly, and in the pocket, the letter which she had found that afternoon burned through the heavy material with insistent force, and its words rang wildly in her ears.

Through the long French windows, she could see the old Tucker house silhouetted against the sky, brightened by starlight.

Finally she turned to Mother Rosa for enlightment.

"The house was empty when we moved up here, wasn't it?"

The old nun nodded. "Nobody has lived in it for 20 years, according to the villagers."

"And yet today—it was alive. It was waiting and ready, as if nobody had ever gone."

Mother Rosa wagged her head practically. "A good cleaning will always bring new life to a house."

"It was more than that," Ellen insisted, and her voice held a strange, hushed bewilderment "There's a spiritual quality there . . . an expectancy——"

"Nonsense, Ellen."

Long Silence

A long silence held the room. Then Ellen spoke again, persistently. "Haven't you ever heard what became of the Tuckers, Mother Rosa?"

"No, Not exactly. I suppose I was never very much interested. They were gone long before we came up here, and I took the empty house for granted. But yesterday when Peter's cleaning woman stopped in for the keys, which he had sent me, she chattered about it."

"Oh, something about how nice it would be to see the old house come to life again after so many years.

"Then he mentioned the accident which caused it to be closed. The old man was dying and his grandson, the last surviving relative, was killed on his way home to him."

The old man was dying. Old Jonathan, the third, the irritable old man who slept in the huge walnut bed and kept his Bible on the table beside him.

The Bible with the pocket in the back flap, into which he could have slipped that last letter which he received from his grandson.

Once again, within her mind, Ellen repeated the last few lines of that letter. ". . . and so, grandfather, I'm bringing the little fellow to make up to you for the disappointment I've been, Robert Jonathan Tucker, seventh generation. He's a chip off the block, a Tucker if ever there was one. He's two weeks old, and not a soul knows about him yet. Not even John Abbott. We'll let you make the announcement."

Not even John Abbott.

Little Fellow

The old man died. His grandson was killed before he ever reached home. But where was the little fellow? Where was Robert Jonathan Tucker, seventh generation?

Of one thing she was certain, John Abbott knew.

As they drove up in front of the apartment, Peter turned to Millicent, "You won't say anything to the folk about it, will you? I'd like to be the one to tell your father. And I can't do that yet." There was a shy entreaty in his voice.

She laughed lightly at his embarrassment. "What quaint, old-fashioned sentiment, Peter!"

He made another feeble attempt as they stood before the door of her apartment. "You see, I'm so terribly obligated to your father as it stands. I can't ask him to take me into the family—not until I have something more to offer."

Once again she laughed. "That's ridiculous, Peter! Don't you suppose I know how father feels?"

Appals Him

The Abbotts were alone in the livingroom. They sat at opposite ends of the divan at the right of the fireplace.

Mrs. Abbott was knitting some soft white Angora wool: she stopped in the act of counting stitches to greet Millicent and Peter as they came in.

"Hello, my dear! So you found Peter after all?"

"Exactly where we thought he'd be. In the old Tucker house."

The older man smiled tolerantly. "It's a long time since anybody took Christmas up there. How do things look, Peter?"

"Great sir. I sent a couple of women from Riverview to clean the house up a bit. Today, when I turned the key in the front door and went in you'd have thought the family had just stepped out to the movies for a few hours."

Abbott nodded. "That's the way I've always wanted it to look . . ." His voice trailed off.

Announcement

Millicent came over to Peter, slipped her arm through his significantly. "Would you mind forgetting that old house for a moment, father? I've something really important to announce."

"What's that, my dear?" Abbott looked up expectantly.

"Peter and I are engaged!"

Mrs. Abbott caught her breath sharply. There was a question in her husband's eyes: the hand which held the pipe trembled noticeably.

What are you saying, Millicent?" He addressed his daughter, but he was looking at Peter, and his voice sounded unusually stern.

Not Engaged

"Not engaged, Mr. Abbott," he amended nervously. "I explained to Millicent that I could not, and would not, ask her to marry me for several years. And certainly not until I spoke to you first, sir."

"Isn't this rather—sudden?" Abbott demanded at length. It seemed a foolish, empty question, but a father must say something.

"Not at all," Millicent replied coolly. "I've been in love with Peter ever since I first met him."

Peter did not answer. There were some things impossible to put into words.

Leans Forward

"Millicent, my dear!" Her mother was leaning forward in her chair, seraching the girl's face intently. "This is something you must be sure of!"

"I know, mother. I'm quite sure. The only problem, of course, is the financial arrangement. Peter thought——"

Her father frowned. "Peter thought?" His attitude inferred that Peter had asked for a key to the mint.

"Don't misunderstand, sir!" Peter implored earnestly. "I only hope that Millicent will wait, until I've been admitted to the bar and accomplished something on my own."

"Hm-m-m." Abbott rose slowly, walked around to the back of his chair. He took several long puffs on his pipe. "That will be another two years," he observed.

No Use Waiting

"Exactly, father." Millicent faced him squarely. "Two long years. There's really no need to waste our youth in senseless waiting, is there?"

"Your youth? My dear, you're only 21!"

"That's an old maid, according to some standards. Besides, everything could be arranged so easily. You could adjust Peter's salary . . . "

To Be Continued.
